GOOD HEALTH & SEXUAL VIGOR CAN BE YOURS

Vitamins are substances which are required by the body if it is to function properly. They are normally provided by foods, but not always in sufficient quantities. This is particularly true of processed foods which have been depleted of their vitamin content.

When extraordinary demands tax the body its nutrients are drained and must be replenished. We do this through proper nutrition; by eating good foods and supplementing our meals with vitamins and minerals. Those of us who have sex every day are especially concerned about the ability to perform successfully and safeguard against impotency—a condition which may be aggravated when certain nutrients are lacking . . . particularly those vitamins associated with sexual potency.

First and foremost the sexually-active adult should take a powerful multi-vitamin & mineral tablet daily for his general well being. During times of stress, and particularly the type which is associated with sex, the body requires more energy and therefore demands additional B vitamins to assist in the metabolic processes. Vitamin E is associated with sexual prowess and is consumed by thousands of sexually-active people who attribute their drive in great part to this vitamin. Bee pollen is gathered from the bee colonies and unsprayed flower fields in Southern Europe—where it is believed that bee pollen has aphrodisiacal properties. Korean Ginseng, particularly highest quality "heaven grade" processed from roots that are at least six years old, has for thousands of years been considered a wondrous rejuvenator and reactivator of the sexual organs in the Orient.

With this knowledge we have combined the highest-quality natural food supplements available for sexually-active adults. Three Sex Combos are available to meet the most discriminating requirements—and only you will know their value after you have added them to your diet. And like hundreds of others now taking Sex Combos we believe you too will find a new and livelier sexual awareness in your life.

The components may be purchased separately, but greater savings are realized when they are bought as Sex Combo packages.

How To Beat The 'Overbook'

Travel Apartments/ Small Hotels

By Jon Lorrimer

More than ever your travel agent must be a miracle worker; in booking you into Europe, especially, he must often use his every wile to nail down the hotel reservation you prefer. Until a couple of years ago he rarely missed. You were always satisfied, and your repeat business assured him of an uninterrupted cash flow. But that was before Europe began to be overrun by oil-rich Arabs; each a potentate, he'd just as soon buy a hotel—cash on the oil-drum—as dicker for a several rooms for his harem. In Baghdaddy-on-the-Thames (formerly called London) that's precisely what's happening. Also in London are the hordes of migrant Indians—would-be small-business entrepreneurs who've taken over so many of the 2-star and 3-star hotels for their huge families that the air is heavy with the pungent aromas of curry and coriander.

In London it often seems that no sooner is a spanking new luxury hotel opened than it's crowded with men in flowing caftans, and jewel-veiled women. And if, as a seasoned traveler, you have what you fondly believe to be a 'definitely confirmed' reservation, you just may find there's been a "much-regretted oversight," and "Frightfully sorry, we just can't accommodate you at the moment, but we can billet you in Brighton until a room here becomes available." Well, that billet in Brighton can last forever. Still, the hotel may have done you a favor, for otherwise you could pound the pavements from the big-and-expensive to the big-and-cheap, and the SRO sign will greet you at every hotel desk. So you settle for Brighton and spend much of your vacation time commuting the 40-odd miles each day (which is not to badmouth Brighton—as gorgeous as it is gay, and vice versa—but it's London on your gay agenda . . . for that's where it's mostly at).

Because of this population shift/tourist glut, and the vice of overbooking, there is a compensating phenomenon called the Travel Apartment that should be of special interest to the vacationing Anglophile, and of even greater interest if you are traveling with others. There are several basic aspects of the Travel Apartment plan. One is that it costs far less than even 2-star hotels for the same length of time . . . (2) the dollars you save mean just that much more fun . . . (3) the added feature of having the most modern cooking facilities—including utensils—can save you money you'd pay for expensive restaurant meals . . . (4) you can bring home interesting all-night tricks without hassle from hotel management, and (5) you can book through Travel Apartment agencies while in the United States. Here's more about the Travel Apartments plan:

There are more than 1000 such apartments in London, costing from upwards of $280 per week. All are within a two-mile radius of Piccadilly Circus which, of course, make them convenient to the great department stores, West End theaters, and for cruising gay areas in South Kensington, Chelsea, and Earls Court. That $280 will pay for a commodious studio apartment sleeping two, so the shared cost is just $20 per day. Every Travel Apartment is fully equipped with modern kitchen, linens, bathroom, as well as phone (you pay only for your calls), gas and electricity, daytime maid service (cleaning), TV, and central heating and air-conditioning. All you need do is pick up your key, lay in a supply of kippers and tea, and you're ready for your first day's breakfast in London. The Travel Apartments plan also has two- and three-bedroom apartments that will sleep up to eight persons. Prices vary as to size and desired luxury.

British Airways new Apartments Plan operates in some similar manner. The required minimum stay is one week, and the rates can be even lower. About $160 to $250 for a studio-to-one-bedroom apartment, and from $100 to $350 for a two-bedroom. Here, however, the rates are based on number of occupants (in the Travel Apartments plan this is not a prime consideration). Also, the lower rates are a result of air travel via British Airways from these United States airport cities: New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, Washington, Miami, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

There's still another plan. If you want to posh it—thinking Mayfair—there is a block of about 60 apartments in this elegant London area, with just about all the luxury one could desire. Book for a day or a year, or any stay in-between. No minimum, no maximum. Diplomats in London for just a few days like this 'minimumability'. The address is 47 Park Street, right in Mayfair, and the cost is from $90 a day for a two-room apartment sleeping three, to $130 a day for a three-room apartment sleeping six. Any way you look at it, the cost per person is practically peanuts. You may book an apartment in this Mayfair block through Utell International, 119 West 52 Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.

For complete information on the Travel Apartments plan, contact Travel Apartments, Ltd., 613 Grand Buildings, Trafalgar Square, London W.C. 2. And for the British Airways tourist-apartment plan, contact British Airways offices in the United States.

Posher still? Draycott House in Chelsea—near Harrods, and near cruisy Chelsea bars, discos, and so on—has 10 really swank apartments, some with roof-gardens or balconies that look out on lovely London and make entertaining a delight.

WHEN POSH COMES TO SHOVE

Here, however, there is a world of difference . . . what was cheerful and colorful and flawless formica in the less-expensive travel apartments give way to swag 'n valance draperies, and a choice of interior design. You may have authentic Edwardian or English Tomorrow. Also, if you don't have the slightest egg-boiling talent you may engage one or more kitchen staff to do it for you. And there's brought-in meal service (extra, of course) . . . even party-catering.

Prices are given only on application, so if you're rolling in the stuff, write Draycott House, 10 Draycott Avenue, London SW3 2SA. But whatever the tariff, it will still be less than for accommodations at the Royal Garden, the Churchill, the Hilton and suchlike.

Best of all, there's no tourist clamor in the lobby . . . no tear-stained, travel-worn people being 'billeted in Brighton' (or even Bristol, sometimes!). In short, you've beaten the overbook system. You go in peace; you'll have paid for your apartment before you leave, so taxi in from Heathrow, pick up your latchkey, and you're in the business of having London fun.

IT HAPPENED IN ACAPULCO

Does that sound like the title of an old Ricardo Montalban movie? Actually, the scope of these travel-apartment plans is so varied and vast they may seem like a miraculous 'first'. Yet the idea is not precisely new. It's just that it's catching fire in tourist-exploding Europe.

Actually, the idea was first developed in Acapulco as a kind of back-of-the-hand slap at those huge chain hotels, such as the Hilton, which have given hotel 'reservationism' a bad name wherever they set up shop. Here's not only where overbooking began, but where the 'travel condominium' idea flowered.

Because it had long been the custom of the monolithic chain hotels to overbook, particularly during the months of January and February—just to make sure every inch of space, right down to a maid's room, was sold—jet-lag travelers arriving with 'confirmed reservations', for which they'd paid the first day's room rental in advance as security, found themselves being routinely shuttled off to hotels of lesser quality: so 'lesser', in fact, that if they weren't exactly fleabags they had more than their share of cucarachas. Sometimes the day of 'repatriation' to the originally booked hotel never arrived . . . particularly if the guest who was enjoying 'your' room decided to enjoy it still longer . . . perhaps the entire length of your 'vacation'.

Then Ron Lavender, an important figure in Acapulcan real estate, and his associates, got the idea of making available many of their long-term seasonal condominium apartments for shorter stays—a week or more. So, for example, you now have the Holiday Inn peering rumple-feathered at the upstart Condominium Galeon—both overlooking the same beach and bay . . . and with the Holiday Inn charging as much for a single room as a shared-expense apartment for two in the Galeon.

The latter has not only a bigger bedroom, but a spacious living room, a kitchen, bath, and such to-boot features as daytime maid service (the maid will even do laundry, shop, cook, as well as keep the apartment beautifully clean). So if you're tired of fighting the Battle of Hilton et al, wherever you go, and if you have Acapulco in your plans, you might look into this condominium-by-the-week plan. Arrange to spend just one night at a hotel, and next day either visit Ron Lavender's office on the Costera M. Aleman, or check the English-language newspaper The News for rentable choices . . . now, simply loads!

WHY NOT TRY A SMALL HOTEL?

Inasmuch as these travel-apartment plans are not available in many favorite European vacation cities, why not simply write ahead to certain small hotels or pensioni, make your own arrangements without benefit of travel agent, send the required deposit, and find out what you've been missing in comfort and convenience all these years? From time to time we'd like to recommend some of these small hostleries. You might want to jot down the information for future reference . . . they've been around for years, and will be just as welcoming when you do arrive.

Generally, these are not gay pensioni/hotels. But Europe has long been more understanding of gay people and owners/managers of these smaller establishments welcome gays, along with all other congenial people. For example,

ROME

There's a very popular pensione close by the Spanish Steps. Some gay guidebooks (not "Private Stock") dub it gay, but it's not. Lots of gay people stay there simply because it's 'hard-on' the Steps. But it's an 'everybody' pensione and you'll like the Pensione Scalinata di Spagna, Piazza Trinita dei Monti 17. This is a modest, inexpensive and well-run pensione. There's also an excellent restaurant, La Rampa, just below (it stays open until midnight) and lots of 'cruised-out' gay guys come here for a cappuccino. The pensione is open all year long; there are 10 double and 4 single rooms, some with bath. The modest tariff is less than $12 and this includes breakfast. There's also a pleasant outdoor flowered terrace for dining. The Pensione Scalinata di Spagna puts you right in the middle of a huge slice of Roman gay life . . . just because it's there already! English spoken . . . the telephone (06) 679-3006.

IBIZA

Although Ibiza is no longer the unspoiled island—and tourism is big business (as everywhere in Europe)—one may bypass the sky-high prices of the big hotels in/around Ibiza Town and San Antonio. Since the fleshpots of these areas are really the draw—and especially the gay draw these days—the trick is to stay in smaller island hamlets and drive or scooter-bike to 'where it's at'. Here's a good recommendation.

The Hotel Hacienda in San Miguel. It's the miniature architectural masterpiece of a Belgian/Polish designer named Lipsig. It's both elegant and very friendly, and you'll love it because of the many gay nationals who come here from France, England, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, as well as elsewhere in Spain. Lovely and casual, and quite sophisticated, the Hacienda is open from April 1 to September 30. It has 48 double/4 single rooms . . . all with bath, phone, radio, air-conditioning, refrigerator, terrace, sea-view, TV room, indoor heated pool, plus a garden surrounded by a fragrant, piney woods. Also two outdoor pools and a tennis court. Everything but Vitas! Take it with breakfast and the price is about $14 per person, for two sharing a room; meals are about $6; and if you want room and full board the cost is about $22 a day. There's also mini-bus service to San Antonio. Live it up in town . . . stay in blissful peace and comfort at night. And taxis are cheaper here than anywhere else in Europe.

PARIS

Think Paris, and you first think of how impossibly costly it is these days. Well, if you're 'George Cinquing' it, or Ritzing it, of course it is. But think of a small hotel such as the Hotel de l'Abbaye, 10 rue Cassette, and you have solid comfort in lovely surroundings, and in staggering distance of the Left Bank. In fact, there's no need to stagger . . . you're there!

This small hotel is a charmingly restored 18th-century residence of some wealthy Parisian . . . now with its 44 ruge rooms gone commercial. Each of these 44 double rooms (no singles) has bath and telephone. There's a sitting room, bar, and an interior courtyard. It has no restaurant, but so many expensive/inexpensive cafes, bistros and restaurants are nearby there's no problem about food. What's the tariff? Room with breakfast $18 to $23 per person. This hotel is a small but precious jewel tucked between St. Germain des Pres and Montparnasse, and you'll love it.

We'd like to end this current listing of attractive, inexpensive small hotels with a mention of one that few non-Parisians know very much about. It's called simply L'Hotel, and it has great significance for gay guys because it was the Parisian hotel loved by Oscar Wilde. In his days of exile—and aware that his time was growing short—he made a quip about L'Hotel. "I'm dying above my means!" he said. And he did . . . right here.

In the late 1960s the present owner of L'Hotel, Guy-Louis Douboucheron, transformed it. Of special interest is the old stone cellar which has now been magic-wanded into a fairyland of dining and wining elegance. Its Winter Garden Restaurant is one of the best in Paris, and its rooms have been restored to their authentic Parisian best. For example, Oscar Wilde's room has been faithfully restored . . . also that of turn-of-the-century singer and diseuse, Mistinguett . . . her own furniture is still in her room.

The hotel is by no means inexpensive, but it's certainly not so overpriced—as are all other first-class Paris hotels—that the economy-minded gay guy who'd like to live it up a little, can.

There are just 27 rooms, all double, all with bath, telephone, radio, TV and air-conditioning. Even at the low estate of the Yankee dollar abroad, the tariff is only 150 to 26 francs—figure no more than $35 to $55 for the day. The address of L'Hotel is 13 rue des Beaux-Arts, Paris VI. This sixth district, incidentally, is heavy with gay activity—lots of gay bars and clubs. Which is only natural, of course . . . Oscar got here first!

With summer almost here, permit us to remind you that Fire Island is the greatest gay resort going—and that if you aren't already familiar with it, you should secure a copy of our special Caribbean/Fire Island issue (advertised in the rear of this magazine, above the back issues ad). When to go, where to stay, how to get there, and what happens after you're on the scene is what you'll find out. Limited supply left.

Cruising The Panama Canal

Is There Life After Gay Sex In Panama City?

By Billy Holmes

Jimmy Carter's giveaway of the Panama Canal renewed world interest in the "big ditch," particularly among Americans. Not since Teddy Roosevelt manned a steam-shovel and made headlines around the world, has the desire to see this modern wonder been so keen.

The French, under the leadership of Count Ferdinand de Lesseps, the builder of the Suez Canal, labored for nearly 20 years in their attempt to build a canal across the isthmus of Panama, which was undertaken in 1882. They failed, not for lack of engineering skill, but because of bad management and such diseases as malaria, yellow fever and cholera—which killed hundreds at a clip. The effort ended in scandal; investors lost heavily and the Count was brought to trial for his part in the mess.

In 1903 Panama successfully revolted from Colombia. Soon afterwards the U.S. and Panama signed a treaty, guaranteeing Panama independence and a lot of money. In 1904 the U.S. purchased from the French Canal Company its rights and properties for $40 million. Construction commenced; property flanking the Canal was bought up for $5 million, and 10 years later, at a final cost of $387 million, the Canal was completed. Including that amount, since 1903 the U.S. has invested about $3 billion in the Canal but has only recovered two-thirds of that, mainly through tariffs paid by ships traversing it.

For all practical purposes, the land flanking the Canal—roughly five miles on either side, and 50 miles long—is U.S. territory; this strip is known as the Canal Zone. All else is Panama, under the control of the Panamanians. The U.S. Government operates the Canal but employs Panamanians as well as Americans.

Unlike the Suez Canal, the Panama Canal is not "sea level." That is to say, it is not a simple ditch. You enter from either the Caribbean Sea on the Atlantic Ocean side, or from the Pacific Ocean, and you're carried uphill in a series of 'locks'—bathtub-like chambers that fill with water and raise the ship step-by-step onto a lake, which takes up most of the Canal's length. Then at the far end, you're lowered via more locks down to sea level. To get from one lock to the next, small locomotives, affectionately called 'mules', pull you through—attached to the ship by heavy cables. Gatun Lake, which looks like any beautiful lake peppered with islands, but with palm trees, is 85 feet above sea level. Each lock chamber is 110 feet wide and 1,100 feet long, and there are three sets of locks, two at the Pacific end and one on the Atlantic side.

The Panama Canal which exists today is not the same channel started by the French; that entranceway, now grown over with jungle foliage, can be seen as you enter from the Atlantic end. The water that fills the locks is dropped into it by gravity, never to be reclaimed from the sea; it is supplied by Gatun Lake, which remains filled, thanks to the great amount of rain that falls on the isthmus. Each ship requires 52 million gallons of water for its passage through the locks.

Ships are charged according to net tonnage. The largest toll ever paid by a passenger ship was $68,499.46 by the Queen Elizabeth 2 in 1977. The smallest toll, 36¢, was paid by Richard Halliburton, who swam the Canal in 1928. The average cruise ship pays about $50,000. But the price is cheap, considering that if it weren't for the Canal, ships desiring to get from the Atlantic to the Pacific would have to sail around the bottom of South America, perhaps taking two weeks (as compared with the nine hours needed to traverse the Canal, most of which is spent on Gatun Lake) and consuming thousands of dollars worth of fuel.

The Panamanians are a hostile lot. Much of their heritage is in the workers who came to Panama at the turn of the century to help build the Canal; the majority of manual laborers came from Barbados. They have, from one generation to the next, passed on the notion that since their hands built the Canal, they are the rightful owners and should control it. Just after Congress approved Jimmy Carter's present to the Republic of Panama, the more radical 'Panamaniacs' revealed that they were set to blow up the Canal had the giveaway been rejected. In fact, when the Canal is taken over by the Panamanians, they will be forced to call on American ingenuity to help run it—for putting this complex, Swiss-clock-accurate piece of machinery in the hands of the Panamanians is tantamount to having a monkey repair your TV set.

The Panama Canal is a marvel to see, and a wonder to experience if you are able to traverse it on board a cruiseship. Panama City, the major town on the isthmus, is difficult to reach by plane because there are few direct flights; one usually has to fly to a second city and change planes. Flights are also expensive and operate only certain days of the week. Moreover, unless you're into gambling and stay pretty close to a good hotel (the El Panama Hotel, for example), the place is a bore, and the streets are filled with muggers at night. Most people who vacation in Panama spend only a few hours in uncomfortably hot Panama City, just long enough to view the Canal from nearby Miraflores Locks, and then fly off to one of the pretty, though quiet, offshore islands where there are luxury resorts.

Cristobal, a city of considerable size on the Atlantic end, is known to be dangerous even during the day; count on being mugged, as most travel books warn (and they are so right!). Cruise ships dock in Balboa, the port for Panama City at the Pacific end, which is about five miles from Panama City. Passengers are always advised to stay on board the few hours the ship is in port, and special buffets are usually prepared, and local entertainers brought on to entice people to avoid a possibly disastrous excursion into town. I recently traversed the Canal aboard the Fairsea, a luxurious cruiseship operated by the Sitmar Cruises. Of the approximate 800 passengers on board, I know of only one who cabbied it into Panama City when we docked about 7 P.M.—a gay guy I met on board, who went in, hoping to find some action—gay or straight trade—in one of the movie-houses reputed to be makeout places. He didn't get anything, perhaps because it was too early in the evening. He did sense hostility on the part of the Panamanians, who looked upon him as a "wealthy American" (in fact, he's a Canadian, about 40), and on his way back to the ship, walking down the main avenue (Ave. Central), he was mugged by two guys, one from the front and one from the rear, who used knives to wrestle his tote-bag containing money and his passport from him—while at least 30 people watched and did absolutely nothing to help.

I'm convinced that the Panamanians are contemptuous of anybody who is either an American, or looks like one. I am convinced, by everything I have read, heard and witnessed, that Panama City is more dangerous than Harlem for a white man at midnight. And this is so if you're straight, wary of dark streets and the likes—let alone "typically gay" in quest of action in nearly-empty movie-houses, deserted toilets around town, and dark alleyways. Talk about the sacrificial lamb!

Having said that, I shall list for you below the places best known for possible contacts, either with Panamanians, U.S. servicemen who are employed in the Canal Zone and tourists like yourself. I urge you, if you can afford it, to cruise the Canal by ship (the most popular, and most reasonable cruises are those operated by Princess and Sitmar, but there are many cruises which your travel agent knows about; the Princess ships, by the way, are featured on TV's "Love Boat"). This is really the best way to see it, and traversing the Canal is truly exciting. Ship-board life is easy and sweet, and there are usually a half-dozen gay passengers on board, and at least twice that many among the entertainers, officers and crew who are openly available (provided, of course, you take the initiative; most officers and crewmen are hesitant about approaching passengers, who are in fact, their employers). Best time to go is in winter, when the Canal Zone is dry and comfortably warm (it rains heavily at certain times of the year).

Concerning the gay scene, be advised that places change and that my listings are the best-known places at this time, based on personal experience and information sent to Ciao! by recent travelers. If you make the scene, it might be wise to do it with a friend (there's safety in numbers!).

Boccaccio's, 19 Vis Fernandez de Cordoba, off Ave. Central in Panama City has potential. It's very popular. Hustlers too. Also try Ovalo, Calle Monteserrin 17-100; and Paris Bar at the intersection of Calle Monteserrin and Calle J.

Still in Panama City, the mezzanine john in the Hotel Continental may be rewarding, if you're around during the day. And if you want to try street cruising, try the area near the Hotel Internacional (Plaza de Mayo 5) on Ave. Central, after 8 P.M. on weekends and holidays.

If you decide to drive out to one of the beaches (which is safer than cruising Panama City!) try Nueva Gorgona (purchase a map when you arrive). There, try the paths to the left.

In case you do connect with someone who has no place to go, he will in all probability suggest a "push-button house" just outside the city. These are inexpensive convenience places that can be rented for an hour or two or longer for about $5, and discretion and privacy are assured. The "push-button" reference comes from the electric garage doors that help eliminate contact with the manager or other personnel when you enter. The rooms are furnished with such extras as record players to help assure a pleasant stay for guests—almost all of whom use the houses for sex.

Concerning the legal aspect of homosexuality in Panama, the safe age in the country itself is 16, and 18 in the Canal Zone. Avoid making it with "jail bait."

A final point: To get the most out of a visit to the Canal you should endeavor to find out all you can about its rich history. David McCullough's award-winning book, "The Path Between the Seas," makes excellent reading and contains many fascinating photographs taken during the construction of the Canal. Published by Simon & Schuster (New York), the $14.95 hard-cover or the less-expensive paperback (released in 1978) can be purchased at any good bookstore (if a copy isn't available, request that one be ordered for you). It's an education and a treat.

The Wonderful, Wacky World Of Gay Las Vegas

By David Parker

The world has many wonderful and wondrous fun spots, and when it comes to gay resorts (sex, Sex and more SEX!) nothing compares with Fire Island. But, all pleasures considered, and generally speaking . . . the greatest playland in all the world is Las Vegas. It has no peer.

As author Gene Christopher puts it in "Arthur Frommer's Guide to Las Vegas," an informative paperback available at your local bookseller's:

"Las Vegas is a winning resort city. It's a desert wonderland, the Number One American vacation destination.

"Las Vegas has trumped Hollywood's card as the world's entertainment capital. You can see more name stars glowing on stage every night than MGM had on its movie lot during its entire history."

There are now nearly 40,000 hotel/motel rooms in town and more are sprouting up every year. And, even more amazing, every weekend all year long sees them booked solid. Most rooms serve as doubles, which is another way of saying that there are up to 80,000 visitors in town from Friday night thru Sunday noon. And, thanks to the bargain packages offered by most hotels during the week, crowds don't thin out that much between weekends.

Add to these staggering numbers the thousands of people who run the hotels and the restaurants, the entertainers, et al, and the potential for human encounters is limitless. (The MGM Grand, the newest, biggest and most glamorous hotel on the scene, employs more than 2,000 people!)

Yet, everything is so orderly. Tourism is the town's industry and the visitor is expertly pampered from the moment he arrives until his plane takes off, to return to reality; for Las Vegas is detached from the real world. Here time stands still, marked only by the rising and setting sun, which is largely ignored by every facility which concerns tourists; the town stays open and hums 24 hours a day, day in and day out 365 a year. Restaurants serve breakfast all day long, respecting whatever time happens to be morning for you. Go down to the casino at 5 A.M. and it will be packed with people playing at the tables or bent on beating the slots. Dance your feet off in a disco all night if that's your bag. Fun is waiting all the time.

Las Vegas is not that big, in terms of city boundaries. You can drive from one end to the other in 20 or so minutes. But you will need wheels, whether you rent a car or use taxis. Buses ply the main routes but are of little value to the gay visitor who does the scene, because the hot spots are scattered and not where buses make regular stops. Taxis can be used but are difficult to get on weekend nights and other busy times unless you are downtown or on "The Strip" (explanation follows); if you're in one of the gay bars out on a highway, for example, you will have to phone for one and wait as long as an hour to be picked up. If you drive, be sure and rent a car at the airport as soon as you arrive in order to get good value; and book ahead through your travel agent to avoid a hassle and also get the best possible rate. Map in hand, you'll find that getting around is easy, and in a day or so you'll learn the main routes easily.

A LAND DIVIDED

Las Vegas has two districts for tourists: Downtown, along Fremont St., mainly between the Union Plaza Hotel on Main St., at the foot of Fremont, and the intersection of Las Vegas Blvd. So., (this stretch of Fremont being called Casino Center); and Las Vegas Blvd. So., between the Sahara Hotel (intersection of Sahara Ave.) and the Hacienda Hotel, at the far end (past Tropicana Ave., near the airport). This section of Las Vegas Blvd. So., is known as The Strip. It is here that you will find glamorous hotels flanking the boulevard and beckoning tourists to its casinos by day, with brightly-colored signs, bubbling fountains and Roman statuary; and by night with big neon signs, colorfully programmed for movement and bright enough to attract all the moths in the world. The casinos downtown are also lively, and their wrap-around signs emblazoned with nearly 2,000,000 light bulbs defy the power of the sun from the time it sets until it rises.

I've heard it told that two distinctly different kinds of people frequent Las Vegas: Those who stay on The Strip, presumably the better-heeled tourists who have an appreciation for the finer things in life; and those who prefer the downtown hotels, presumably the low-to-lower-middle-class funsters who want comfort but not necessarily flash, lively casinos and simple food. In actual fact, the distinction does not exist. Mostly, where one stays is largely determined by what is available when you go, or by whatever package deal your travel agent books for you. You can stay at one of the good hotels downtown and pay about $30 for a single, or at one of the glamorous, full-service digs on The Strip for only $20 a single. There are plenty of motels everywhere, but you won't save much by opting for one. What does save a lot of money is taking advantage of a package deal, offered by most hotels. You may be required to arrive and leave on certain weekdays, but the savings are truly big.

Below, I'll provide some tips and my personal preferences re: hotels, but your best bet is a knowledgeable travel agent and flexibility (days of travel) on your part in order to take advantage of a good package. The MGM Grand on The Strip, the biggest, grandest hotel in all of Las Vegas, for example, has a 3-day, 2-night deal for $105 per person, and this includes admission to its stage extravaganza, "Halleluja Hollywood," one of the four top shows in town, which normally costs just under $20 per person, if purchased separately. There are even better deals, at such biggies as the Stardust (see comments concerning the stage show here, below). Compare what you get on The Strip at a leading hotel, with something less exciting on The Strip (such as the older Sands Hotel, where $60 for a double is what it costs) or downtown (in a hotel like the Golden Nugget, nice, but not nearly as exciting as a good place on The Strip, where singles go for $30). And when you book a room sans deal, there are no extras included . . . and the rooms are identical.

I usually rent a car when I'm in town, and because I spend as much time downtown as on The Strip, and more time here and there, moving from one gay spot to another, it doesn't much matter whether I stay someplace on Fremont St., or on Las Vegas Blvd. So. Driving time between downtown and the hub of The Strip is about 10 minutes; from downtown to the airport, about 20. A 10-minute taxi ride costs about $4.00.

HOTEL FAVORITES

Downtown, my personal favorite is the Golden Nugget, a new hotel (two years old) adjoining the Golden Nugget Gambling Hall (which has been around for years). In keeping with the Gaslight Era mood of the casino, the hotel has much brass and palms, and the Victorian furniture in the huge rooms (beds are either two doubles or a double-double) is complemented by flocked wallpaper, brass fixtures, deep-red velvet bedspreads and drapes, and flower-design carpets. Very comfortable, however; there's individually-controlled air-conditioning, new color TV/radio sets and all the things any modern hotel has . . . including 24-hour room service (the restaurant off the casino is excellent, and reasonable). And the place is quiet and clean.

There are other big hotels downtown, right across the street. These include the Fremont, The Mint, and (believe it!) the Four Queens. All have casinos. There are plenty of others, such as the newer, more conventional Union Plaza, but I still like the Golden Nugget best.

On Fremont St., but nowhere near the downtown section, is the Showboat Hotel; it's about 20 blocks away, where Fremont crosses E. Charleston Blvd. This is a big place, popular with families, especially those who are into bowling (here, the lanes outshine anything you've ever seen elsewhere!). The place is all by its lonesome, and it is not for me, but I mention it because it's a short walk to the hottest gay action spot in town, the Talk of The Town Adult Book Store, where the peep-show booths are alive 24 hours a day (see comments later). And if you are more the bar-pickup type, you can walk about a quarter of a mile more to the Sixteen-Ten, a bar that is popular with masculine guys (see comments later).

It doesn't matter which big hotel on The Strip you opt for, because they are all good. However, my favorites include the MGM Grand, built at a cost of $100,000,000 in 1973. It has 2,092 rooms, never empty on a weekend since its opening! There are two Olympic-size swimming pools; a casino that's longer than a football field; the big Ziegfeld Room that houses the spectacular musical, "Hallelujah Hollywood"; a huge shopping arcade . . . and the list goes on and on. The rooms are grand. Some have round beds, with mirrors overhead. The doubles (booked normally) go from $31 to $49, and suites start at $87.

Practically across the street is the older Caesars Palace, very posh. I personally prefer the "less classic" excitement of a place like the MGM Grand to the Roman statuary and subdued elegance of Caesars, but it is still a great hotel. Good pool, too. Rates here start at $40 for a double. If you visit, be sure and see the "lifesize" statue of Michelangelo's "David" in the main lobby.

Though I can't say it's a favorite, since it is new, the Barbary Coast, also across from the MGM Grand, (on the side-street), is in the same Gaslight Era style as the Golden Nugget downtown. It's a simple hotel, compared with the full-service palaces that dominate The Strip, but it may appeal to you.

My third favorite is the Stardust, as exciting in many ways as the MGM Grand, but much more reasonable. It attracts a younger, lively crowd, and its stage extravaganza, "Lido de Paris '79," is, in my opinion, the best show in town (see comments later).

Starting at the end of The Strip closest to downtown is the Sahara, an older hotel. And, going up The Strip as far as the airport, you'll find (in this order, with the Frontier being about dead-center), the Silverbird; Circus-Circus (lots of kids here!);

Riviera; Stardust; Desert Inn; Frontier; Castaways; Sands; Holiday Inn (about a half-block in off The Strip); Flamingo Hilton; Caesars Palace; Barbary Coast; MGM Grand; Aladdin; Dunes; Tropicana; and Hacienda. Personally, I prefer to stay someplace between Circus-Circus and the MGM Grand, on either side but away from the Sands, because these two sections are the most exciting (they're alive with people and lights).

There are still other major hotels on or near Paradise Rd., a main thoroughfare that runs parallel to Las Vegas Blvd. So., a block away. They're mainly in the Convention Center area, and include the huge Hilton International, the Landmark, and the Royal Inn. Yes, only a block away, but too far off the exciting strand for me.

If swimming/sunning are important to you, then don't stay at one of the downtown hotels. Stay on The Strip, in one of the big places where there is a pool. You'll especially appreciate it if you go in summer, when the temperature can rise to 110.

THE WEATHER

On the subject of weather, winter days are usually warm and sunny (average 60) and evenings can be 20 degrees cooler (temperatures drop quickly once the sun sets in the desert). In summer it is hot (often over 100), though dry, with comfortable (80-degree average) evenings. The spring and fall seasons are perhaps best.

WHAT TO WEAR

This leads to clothing. Happily, the mood is casual in Las Vegas. Though you may want to dress for the shows, neat slacks and an open sports-shirt will do. In winter, you may also want to wear a sports-coat, not only for the cool night air but also to warm yourself in the usually-too-cold air-conditioned showrooms. Very few dinner places require jacket and tie, and you'd be smart to avoid them. All other times dungarees, t-shirts, work-boots or sneakers are best. Of course, if you do the gay discos and prefer flash, by all means take your bright stuff along.

WHERE TO EAT

Breakfast is available any time of day, but special deals are usually limited to certain morning hours; it's not uncommon to dine in one of the leading hotels on a champagne breakfast for under $1.00. No matter where you eat, the food is usually good, but you'll save a lot of money if you do the buffets around town. For example, you may wish to dine in the restaurant off the casino at the Golden Nugget downtown. There, if you have steak, a complete dinner will probably cost you about $12. But take advantage of one of the champagne buffets, served in most big Strip hotels, and the tab will be anywhere from $1.50 per person (Circus-Circus) to $3.95 (Stardust). Almost always, there's hot roast beef, hot ham, chicken, ribs, vegetables, etc. You can't beat it. The hotels reason that if you get people to come, they'll stay and use the casinos. Good logic, I think.

THE SHOWS

You'll want to see at least one or two shows. The four extravaganzas (a cast of 100 to 200, featuring elephants, waterfalls, fire, beautiful costumes, great performers and almost-nude guys and gals) are at the Stardust ("Lido de Paris '79"—featuring humpy male dancers and Siegfried and Roy, the amazing magicians who make huge elephants vanish before your eyes); the MGM Grand (a musical, grand but not as impressive as the show at the Stardust, in my opinion; the boys here have good bodies); the Tropicana (the extravaganza features acrobatic guys, mostly short in height with muscular bodies—perhaps the best of all show bodies in town); and the Dunes. As I've already indicated, if you can go to only one show, see "Lido de Paris '79" at the Stardust; it will live in your memory forever.

Except for the Dunes (less expensive) admission is $17.50 per person. This includes three drinks of your choice, or a bottle of wine or champagne for two. If you go to a dinner show the price is a little higher (dinner is usually optional and served in another room after the show for about $2.50 additional). There are usually two shows weekday nights, and three on weekends. Call ahead for a reservation (the same day is all right, but the day before is sometimes safer). Procedure is, you show up and join the line snaking up to the show-room entrance about an hour before. The maitre d' checks your reservation at the door, and then turns you over to a waiter, who takes you to your table. At this point it is the wise man who slips the waiter a $10 bill (adequate for a party of two) for a good seat down front. It's worth it. So, at $17.50 a head, plus taxes, plus "insurance money," plus the $5 tip you may wish to give the girl who serves your drinks, the tab comes to about $55 a couple.

The show featuring star performers runs higher, usually about $20 (plus those extras!) without dinner, about $25 with. Go only if you are a fan of the person performing.

If you like extravagant ice shows, there's one at the Hacienda (under $10-plus per person). Broadway-type musicals are at the Union Plaza ($9-plus with dinner). And if you're into female impersonation, there's a spectacular drag show ("Boylesque") at the Silver Slipper, next to the Stardust ($4.95 a person; no need to tip much here). (The bar in the casino outside the showroom at the Silver Slipper can get very interesting, since drag shows usually attract "tough guys" who are fascinated by men in women's clothing and like making it with guys every now and then. The whole mind-trip at the Silver Slipper is strange; regular boxing matches are held in an arena upstairs.)

DAY-TRIPPING

Before I get into the most important part of this article (the gay scene!), let me suggest a few possible daytime outings for those of you planning to visit Las Vegas for more than a few days.

After you've done the slots, after you've done the shows, after you've worn yourself sore from having had too much sex . . . you and a friend might appreciate some wholesome sightseeing in the area. Drive yourself, or take a scheduled tour.

Downtown, The Mint runs tours of its casino for a look behind-the-scenes. You'll see the other side of the two-way mirrors above the tables, and how the money comes in and is collected. The place truly is a mint, as all casinos are.

In the 1930s Las Vegas prospered while the nation suffered through the Great Depression—thanks to work provided by the construction of the Hoover Dam in Black Canyon, 30 miles away. The completion of the dam and the electric power it was able to provide, gave Las Vegas a shot in the arm and has helped keep it glowing ever since. You drive out on Fremont St., which eventually becomes Boulder Highway. Stop in Boulder City just outside the dam for a free movie about its construction, and then drive to it for some spectacular sightseeing. You can also enter the dam for a look at its workings, and drive over it into Arizona. On the way back, about half way to Las Vegas, is Old Vegas, a Mormon fort that houses a colorful restaurant and boutiques.

Valley of Fire State Park is 50 miles from town, north on I-15. One comes here to see the brightly colored rock formations nestled in a valley of muted desert sand and vegetation. Beautiful possibilities for photographers.

I suggest, if you're going to be in Las Vegas a week or more and if car outings appeal, that you pick up a copy of Margo Bartlett Pesek's "Beyond Las Vegas," an informative paperback that sells for $1.50 at hotel bookshops and details 25 motor tours within 300 miles of town. If you have the time and if you're interested you can really get to know this part of the country.

THE GAY SCENE

The human potential in Las Vegas is great. In addition to the hundreds of male entertainers (particularly the dancers!) in town all year long, there are gay service people . . . hairdressers, costumers, lifeguards, card dealers, waiters, etc., etc. And there are also hundreds of gay tourists in town all the time.

Concerning the entertainers, most sign contracts to stay with a show at least six months, and many stay on several years. The boys rent apartments or share houses with the gals and guys they work with, so you won't see many sunning around the hotel pool. In fact, most sleep late after two or three tiring shows the night before, and lead the same day-to-day lives we all do. In other words, you may be there to play 24 hours a day, but they put in a normal workday and like spending some time at home. Of course, they do the gay bars and other fun spots too, but not any oftener than you do when you're at home. The boys usually get a night or two off, and it is on a free evening that you are likely to meet them in a bar. Some hot numbers cruise frequently, as so many of us do, but it's usually very late, after the last show—about 3 A.M. But don't get yourself into a dither if you go to one of the shows and get upset about this dancer or that. Las Vegas is full of great-looking guys and you'll score big if you go to the right places.

In keeping with the winner/loser mood of the town, let me first give you some sure bets:

Good Bars

Most bars have slot machines and other amusements to help you break the ice with a stranger.

The newest and best disco in town is Studio 4, also known as Disco Fever. It's at 4605 Paradise Rd., which runs parallel to Las Vegas Blvd. So., a block over. This is where many of the show dancers come on their nights off and on weekends, late. There is a circular cruise arcade, but like all discos everywhere, cruisin' ain't that great. But come to dance and meet some beauties—and save the fast action for another time or another place. Open all night, closed days. There's a rumor going around that Studio 4 is planning to add a bath with closed-circuit TV in every room. Time will tell.

Another disco that's very popular and housed in a beautiful building, also on Paradise Rd. and not too far from Studio 4, at number 4310, is the Prelude. There are dance contests and featured performers. The Prelude has been around awhile, but is new to this location. Very nice. Open all night but closed days. Occasional action in the desert lot next to it, late at night.

Also on Paradise Rd., though farther out towards the airport, is The Other Place, at number 5410. It's a small but friendly cruise place that's open all the time. Owner Marge operated Le Cafe, a popular dance bar at the corner of Paradise Rd. and E. Tropicana Ave. near the airport until it was set afire not long ago. The building still stands (you pass it just before you reach the airport); it looks as it always did from the outside, but it's gutted-out and closed. Its future is anybody's guess.

Also in the area, near the airport, is the big Red Barn, 1317 E. Tropicana Ave. It's a popular bar, and you can dance here if you like. It gets a mixture of types, even gay women, and it's open all the time.

E. Charleston Blvd. is crossed by Las Vegas Blvd. So., and Fremont St. farther out. If you look at the map, along with these two avenues, it forms the third side of a triangle. Way out on E. Charleston, at least 15 minutes by car, is Maxine's, 5110 E. Charleston Blvd., but actually off the highway on Nellis Blvd. (as you approach Nellis you'll see the hills in the distance, and at the corner of Nellis a "7-Eleven" food-store sign; the Bar is next to the store). You can dance here if you like, but Maxine's is mostly a fun place for anybody doing the bar scene, and particularly for those in this part of town. Open all night.

On E. Charleston, but in town at 1610, is Sixteen-Ten, a bar that gets a mixed bag, but mostly masculine types. If you are into leather, you'll probably find him here. Also, it's here that most of the show dancers looking for serious encounters will cruise after 2 A.M. The Sixteen-Ten is open all the time, but always looks closed and even deserted. It looks like an old shack, and has no signs or outside lights. Go by and stop in during the day to make finding it easier at night. It's opposite Arby's Roast Beef, and next to a Terrible Herbst gas station (that sign is on all night and serves as a landmark of sorts). And it's walking distance from the best sex spot in town, the Talk of The Town Adult Book Store (see below)

Instant Sex

There are a lot of adult book stores with peep-show arcades all over town, and just about every peep is cruised—but the action is sparse and more miss than hit. Frankly, they're not worth your time.

The best of the worst is the Adult Book Shop on Casino Center Blvd., directly across the street from the hotel entrance of the Golden Nugget, downtown. It's open 24 hours. Mostly, straights use the peeps, but it's also frequented by gay regulars who are into doing trade whenever they can get it. There are notes written on the inside of each peep stall to the effect that if you leave your door unlatched somebody will come in and suck you off. It happens, but not at a furious pace. Don't bother to make a special trip, but give it a try if you're downtown. Note the typical downtown hustlers working the place too. This place is better than most others around town, including the one at 419 Fremont St., a short distance away.

Really, there is only one great instant action spot in town, the Talk of The Town Book Store at 2232 E. Charleston Blvd., a short drive or a very long walk (20 or so blocks) from downtown. More accurately, it's their "Peeparama" movie arcade. The 25¢ flicks are mixed gay and straight, but the clientele is 95 percent gay. There are four rows of booths, some with glory holes (though these are situated in difficult-to-maneuver spots). Also, most of the action is in the two-man-to-a-booth category. Open 24 hours a day, but the most active time seems to be between 10 P.M. and 2 A.M. And it's very common to see some top stuff here after 2 A.M. when the crowd is thinner. Those who fail to make out at the nearby Sixteen-Ten come here to shoot off or make a fast pickup to take home late at night (or, more accurately, early in the morning). Several dancers from one of the major shows on The Strip frequent the place regularly this time of night. The crowd is mostly young, though all ages are represented, and you'll also find the expected hustlers, white and black (mostly) as well as the usual crazies who frequent the peeps everywhere. Take the usual precautions, but rest assured that the place is safe and not anything like its counterparts in tough cities like New York, where the hustlers are sharks and will bite off your cock if given the chance.

Practically next door, at number 2222, is The Pearl Adult Book Shoppe, which also has a peep-show arcade. It's darker and not nearly as busy as Peeparama, and a favorite with black hustlers, but the action can be great at times. Straights and closets seem to prefer this place to the one next door on their lunchtime rounds when they come for a fast blow-job. It's not unusual to see a young, straight-looking, humpy guy in dungarees, t-shirt and work-boots drive up in his pickup around lunchtime and enter one of the booths, leaving his door ajar for the first hungry mouth. The place closes at 2 A.M. and opens around 10 A.M., and you should check it out every now and then when a lull hits Peeparama. The combination of both places adds up to the best instant sex potential in town. You'll meet a lot of great-looking guys, even some top show-boys, if you spend some time here. (The twin porno moviehouse on the other side of Talk of The Town can be good, but mostly isn't.)

The Baths

Unless you know what you're looking for, the Manhattan

Health Spa is hard to find. Its address is 1130 Casino Center Blvd. (that's the same avenue that starts downtown and on which the Golden Nugget hotel entrance is), 11 blocks away from Fremont St. The street jumps at one point, making the route confusing. You look for a big square building that has a furniture outlet on the ground floor, and a big 'Manhattan Hotel' sign running across its front on the second floor. The spa is not on Casino Center Blvd., but around the corner, at 15 E. California Ave. It's open 24 hours, and has the usual facilities, but locals always talk it down, mainly because it isn't all that active and because it does not fall into the luxury category. You'll probably be disappointed if you go weekdays; try weekends—which can be good . . . but there's no telling until you get there. At present, the gay community in Las Vegas feels there is a real need for a good baths, and rumors are flying that a new one is going to open soon, near The Strip. This may or may not be the same one rumored to be opening at the Studio 4.

Of Lesser Interest

There's still another gay bar, Snick's, 1402 S. 4th St. This street starts at Fremont, downtown, which divides north from south, and the number indicates that it's about 14 blocks away. Long blocks. It's all by its lonesome in a neighborhood business section, and it gets a mixed bag, not unlike what a bus-depot area bar would get. It has a reputation for hustlers, who, lacking a place to take their tricks, sometimes use the Star Motel, at number 1418 practically next door. Go only if you're curious or have a lot of time in town.

Some gay travel directories incorrectly list Lucky Lady Casino as a makeout spot. In fact, Lucky Lady on Fremont St. is not at all gay. The place that is meant is Lady Luck Casino, downtown, a block off Fremont at the corner of N. 3rd St. and Ogden Ave., near the Continental Trailways bus station. It gets a heavy black crowd, night and day, and bus station types sometimes make contact in its dirty rest-room. Go only if you have nothing better to do and you're in the area. Lady Luck is a loser.

At the corner of Las Vegas Blvd. So. and Washington Ave., on your right, with The Strip at your back, you'll find a hilly park (Lions Club Park). As soon as you cross Washington, pull over and park in the rest-area overlooking the park below. There's a mesh fence, and down the hill is a rest-room. The m.o. here is to sit in your car or stand near it and watch to see who enters the john, then scoot down the hill and strike up some action. It used to be very active, but is quiet now. Again, not worth a special trip, but check it out of curiosity if you're in the area. Note the window, which has a small patch of clear glass, making ideal viewing for any cop who happens to be around at night. Best potential is any weekend morning; also, early evening during the week. Dull. Possibly dangerous. Stay away from the kiddie section of park farther on (Fantasy Park); signs are posted, warning would-be perverts.

On the subject of cops, those in Las Vegas keep pretty much to themselves. The unspoken consensus is that 'crime controls crime'—since bad people getting bad publicity would be bad for the town. Most would-be criminals are not afraid of cops, but usually have a real fear of tough guys who wouldn't hesitate to chop their balls off or slit their throats. Private security guards are all over the place, but they're around to prevent trouble before it happens and pay little attention to the gay scene.

Quality Hustlers

If you prefer to let your fingers do the cruising through the Yellow Pages, there are several services around town that provide both men and women for your pleasure—even both at the same time if you like. They advertise openly in the many free tourist newspapers that are dispensed all over town. Many take Master Charge and VISA, and they are too open not to be honest and reliable. You might make some calls for details if you're into this scene.

The one whose full-page ad read, "Do you want to be a swinger?" advertises 'showguys' as well as couples and swingers and the usual female fare. They're in business 24 hours a day; phone 384-0000. Showgirls of Las Vegas, phone 735-5011 anytime, advertises 'showguys' too. Playgirl Escorts, phone 733-3949, advertises 'male escorts available to anyone'.

Las Vegas is a treat anytime of the year. If you've never thought of it as being anything more than a gambling town . . . I hope I've succeeded in convincing you otherwise. It's a great American resort, the kind of place only American imagination, know-how, determination and money can build. And it's filled with beautiful American guys. The best kind in the world.

Champagne

A Wine Way To Celebrate Life

By Alex Cordine

It is curious that in France, the birthplace of champagne, and where everyone drinks wine twice daily with meals, champagne is an experience enjoyed by a relative few. Conversely, while we in the United States were not born to the grape, and with wine still not part of the usual household table service, the only wine many have experienced is champagne. Well, there is nothing like starting at the top.

In both countries champagne is regarded as something special—as a wine for celebration. It makes a special occasion more so: a wedding, a christening, a blessing of gay lovers, a coming-of-age, an 'off with the old/on with the new', Christmas Eve, New Year's Day, a birthday . . . even a wake, if Uncle Harry went to his reward leaving pots of money for his heirs to divvy up.

Why should champagne be so special? And so expensive? And aren't those American brands that sell for $7 or so per bottle just as good as the more expensive bubbly from France? And aren't French winemakers ripping us off?

Champagne from France is special because it is unique: it is the only champagne made from grapes grown in the province of Champagne. Grapes from which champagne is made in the United States are transplantations of those same French grapes, but when grown in the quite different soil of California, and under far different weather conditions, the taste—at 4000 miles apart—is understandably not the same, either. The best (most expensive) American brands are in their own way excellent . . . some so excellent a connoisseur would have a lot of 'connoisseuring' to do to find flaws. Still, when matched against an equal-quality (equally expensive) French import (discounting the import tax), there is a great difference that even an infrequent wine-drinker can note.

Nor are the French wine-makers ripping us off. They have years of good and poor (scanty) yields, and—when coupled with the constant effort to supply as much as their winepresses can produce—the law of supply and demand drives up the price.

Aside from the uniqueness of the grapes from Champagne, the telling difference, even among French champagnes, is caused by the method used to produce the wine. In France there are three principal methods. The most expensive champagnes—the so-called Grand Marques (premium brands)—are produced by the time-honored, and quite slow, Methode Champenoise, a totally 'hand job' operation.

Somewhat lower in price are those champagnes produced by the Transfer method, a 50% manual/50% machine operation. The least expensive champagnes (although never cheap) are produced by the Charmat or bulk method. As the hand of the artist gives way to that of the mechanic, more champagne is produced and the price is naturally lower. Thus a $35+ bottle of Moet, Mumm or Dom Perignon . . . an upwards-of-$25 Piper-Heidsieck . . . and downward from $20 for less-advertised brands, such as Veuve Chicquot, Cunard-Duchene and several others. Quite a price (and quality) difference between all-manual and all-machine methods.

METHODE CHAMPENOISE

All champagnes begin with the harvesting of the grapes. But from there, one method has little in common with another. First, by French law, only two kinds of grapes may be used in making champagne. These are the white Chardonnay and red Pinot Noir which grow in or around the province of Champagne. Nowhere else in France. Next, grapes are rated/scaled and the highest-rated will be used for the most expensive premium brands. Some firms, however, grow most of their grapes on their own domaine and so this may make the price of a premium somewhat less than that of its 'colleagues' of equal nobility, made from the same grapes, but which were expensively bought on the competitive market after spirited bidding. So with the best of white and red grapes on hand the Methode Champenoise begins with the making of

The 'must'. In one operation the white grapes are painstakingly (get every drop) pressed. In a separate operation the red grapes are quickly crushed to yield the must, or essential juice, so that the skins which contain red pigment can be instantly removed and not color the wine. After fermentation, racking and filtering, the wines are separately put to sleep through the winter.

The cuvée. Comes spring, the wine blender or cellar-master blends the two wines. The ratio is usually 60% from the red to 40% from the whites. This is a great solid champagne. A big, full-bodied wine that is the noblest and most expensive, and preferred by most connoisseurs. Still, it's too heavy for some, and so the process of the cuvee or blend is delicately employed to produce a lighter, more buoyant champagne—equally noble and expensive—which is preferred by most regular champagne drinkers. Some like it still lighter, so a shift to more white and less red gives a taste and texture that 'tongues' just right to others. So champagnes of different bodies, tastes, heavinesses, lightnesses, sweetnesses and drynesses are simply fractional shifts of red to white, and thus one buys it as full-bodied Krug, Bollinger or Roederer, to name just a few brands . . . or Taittinger or Laurent-Perrier, both lighter . . . or the lighter-still Piper Heidsieck that most of us have experienced at elegant celebratory occasions.

It's not, therefore, different grapes that change the taste and texture of a fine champagne, but the skill of the cellar-master in producing the cuvee desired. Since his art can satisfy all tastes, producers have him blend according to the demand of domestic and foreign markets.

The bottling. When the cuvee has been created and the two wines have been allowed to mate, the bottling is the next operation of the Methode Champenoise. The 'married couple' is poured into heavy glass bottles with the 'pinched behind'. The reason for this indented bottom is not to rip-off the buyer, but simply to keep the gas buildup from exploding the bottle. With the bottom secure there's no risk. Into the bottle, along with the blend, goes the liqueur de tirage—a sugar-syrup mixture which creates a second fermentation. Some cellar-masters add a little yeast to reinforce the gas buildup. Then the bottle is closed with a temporary cap/cork and put to rest so that carbon-dioxide gas is formed. During this time certain impurities not visible or removable during the fermentation period will be brought out. Next, the process known as Remouage (or riddling). For several months employees of the winemaking establishment, who are called riddler, will go through the cellars each week or two, turning the bottles gently a little more each time, so that after several months the bottles will have made a complete circle from head-down to head-down. Having come full circle all those impurities will have collected around the vicinity of the cap. Thus the next step is

The disgorging. The bottles are set upended (neck down) in freezing brine and a conveyor belt takes them to a skilled attendant (to a machine in other methods) who expertly flips off the cover. Just the wine at the neck will have been frozen, and this collection of impurities is quickly removed and none of the other wine is allowed to escape. Generally, there's enough gas in the bottle to expel the icy goo. Sometimes the attendant must lend a hand. Now to compensate for the loss of volume a little more champagne is added. A permanent cork is inserted and wired, and once more the bottles are put to sleep—for months or years. Just before they go out to the market they are labeled and cased. So after as many as 200 individual bottle handlings, plus a 'hotel room' for as much as five years, it's understandable that champagne made by the Methode Champenoise is so great and so much more expensive. True love has gone into every step of the making. If the maker has followed the Methode Champenoise you will know it because he has the right to label his bottle Fermented In This Bottle. An assurance of purity and greatness.

THE TRANSFER METHOD

This is the part-hand and part machine method. Allowing for initial pressing/crushing by machine methods, the turning of the bottles in the winecellars is the same. What is mechanically different from that point is that the bottles are not hand-opened for removal of impurities. They are opened into a specifically-pressurized tank that is refrigerated by a solution forced through ducts. The impurities fall to the bottom and the wine is then 'transferred' to new bottles. Here, the label difference reads Fermented In The Bottle . . . not This bottle.

THE CHARMAT METHOD

The label should show that this is the process used. It means that it has been a wholly bulk process. The wine has had its second fermentation in a pressure tank . . . not in a second bottle, as in the Transfer method. Note the label. If it reads 'carbonated' it means that carbon-dioxide gas has been charged into it. And so the entire operation, from the harvesting and pressing of the grapes until the wine reaches your lips, has been of entirely mechanical procedure.

The artificiality of this is easily and often unpleasantly noted in both the least-expensive French imports and in the medium-priced American champagnes. It's always why so many champagne glasses are left virtually full on tables at celebratory functions. It's too gassy, thus too farty, and too burning in the stomach. The host (1) wanting to save money, or (2) not being champagne-knowledgeable has ruined his party/reception. The claim that one prefers very dry to absolutely arid champagne is exposed by this evidence. Champagne should always be a treasured delight . . . not just 'champagne, to be champagne'.

The best American champagnes will have been produced by something less hand-operated than the Methods Champenoise. We do have tight unions in the wine-producing industry, and the labor pass-alongs to you are enormous. Thus even a poor, gas-filled American champagne costs you more than it should. If American wine-producers adhered more closely to the Methode Champenoise they could serve only a small part of the American champagne public. Still, there are a few produced by the Methode Champenoise, but they are not going to cost you much less than premium French brands (just the difference of the import tax). They are Schramsberg and Domaine Chandon (related to Moet et Chandon of France). However much some may consider it a clone of the founder, the champagne is just as great. Other winemakers using great care in other methods are Korbel, Mirassou, Almaden and Masson. Rarely a disappointing bottle. All are California champagnes.

The East is represented by Taylor and Great Western. Great Western's second division also produces the popular Gold Seal champagne. In general, East Coast champagne is made with Eastern labrusca and other (hybrid) grapes grown in the area. Still, with the unusual new methods developed by Taylor and Great Western, what emerges is a fine champagne in every sense of taste and texture. The Gold Seal division puts out a particularly fine brand called Chas. Fournier. If you'd like to get to know champagnes better, you needn't go beyond these American brands—most others are somehow disappointing. And if you simply can't afford such fine French imports as Mumm, Moet, Krug, Bollinger, Taittinger and the 'Heidsiecks': Piper-Heidsieck, Charles Heidsieck and Heidsieck et Cie., why not investigate sparkling wines (which can't be legally called 'champagne') that are produced in other countries. A good Asti Spumante from sunny Italy, where the grapes are varied and always great, can stand with head high among most champagnes. And the best will be much less expensive than the least expensive French.

Champagne should be experienced more often than at celebratory functions. Don't wait for the wake of Uncle Harry . . . or the new lover; why wait for an occasion? Enjoy it now!

"Cuba, si?" "Yanqui, no!"

By Robert Blanc

It's my observation that all things beautiful are forever only when they die or otherwise vanish when they are still beautiful. Had Rudolph Valentino lived to know old age, would the memory of his youth remained as untarnished as it has for those who shared his time, and for those of us who have come to know the legend? We will never know how long Jayne Mansfield's beauty was to last; she will be remembered forever only as she was, beautiful when she left. Joan Crawford, beautiful in her own way, in her own time, lived a little too long; her former stature is overshadowed by the news reports of her condition when she died, and the ugly picture painted by her adopted daughter, Christina in her book, "Mommie, Dearest."

When the Sugarcane Curtain was lowered on Cuba nearly 20 years ago her former beauty was sealed forever—to be remembered to this day by those travelers now approaching or having passed 50, who in their youth had a romance with Cuba. These are the people who have made the Cuba that once was legendary; we have all heard tales of the tropical paradise in the days before Castro marched in. We've all heard how in those days the streets of Havana were alive with pleasures—no matter what your particular joy happened to be. When your ship docked or your plane touched down, Juan was right there offering you his sister, his brother, his donkey and his stash; anything for a price. At bargain prices too.

It so happens that Puerto Rico has long been the most beautiful, most modern island in all the Caribbean—but those among us who knew the Cuba of old stubbornly refuse to acknowledge that Puerto Rico is now what Cuba never could have been—even without Castro.

They cling to the past, to what could have been only in its time.

Cuba is only 90 miles from Key West; Havana was the easiest of all places to reach at a time when plane travel was in its infancy. Its proximity to the U.S. is what encouraged American businessmen to invest in the country, to bring it to the point of development it reached before its fall (and it has fallen, in every way!). It was in its time the easiest foreign place for most U.S. travelers to reach, and it had plenty of exciting incentives to help lure tourists. Sex was readily available. The climate was right. The beaches were beautiful. The hotels were glamorous. The food was good. Gambling casinos were in full swing. A variety of entertainment—ranging from outdoor Radio City-type shows to indoor sex performances by the likes of "Superman" with his 14" cock—made Havana a helluva lot more exciting than strolling down Collins Avenue in Miami Beach, at that time a very popular U.S. vacation destination.

After Castro took over and ousted American businessmen he traveled to the U.S., living in Union City, N.J. for awhile (Union City is second only to Miami as a settlement of Cuban exiles), learning to speak English in order to communicate with U.S. government officials with whom he had hopes of striking up a deal for his country. But our government snubbed him; he was treated with rudeness in Washington, ignored, and more or less was told that he was an ignorant though aggressive Latino who was wasting his time and would never amount to much. Fidel "Macho Man" Castro couldn't take it and thus turned to those who had the right words and a lot of money, the Russians. And the Sugarcane Curtain fell for U.S. travelers to Cuba. The romance was over, perhaps forever.

What has come to pass we all know. What you may not know is that for 17 years or so Cuba was "closed" only to U.S. travelers, and that Canadians—who have never stopped vacationing in Cuba—have been going down 40,000-strong for years. Add to this figure the numbers who arrive from Latin America, Europe, Russia and other socialist countries—and you quickly realize that Cuba has been getting about 60,000 vacationers a year, mostly in winter.

Prior to Jimmy Carter's negotiations and eventual decision to allow Americans to visit Cuba a couple of years ago, only a select few Americans were permitted in to do business, and this was by special arrangement and by way of Canada, usually via a Canadian airline. For the past couple of years quite a few Americans have traveled to Cuba, at first as part of a Canadian tour group, and more recently direct via TWA from New York, as part of a tour group put together by Caribbean Holidays, Inc., a U.S. outfit acting more or less as an agent for Cubatur, the government's tourist agency (much like Intourist in Russia). To go, you simply have your local travel agent book you on a Caribbean Holidays 8-day, 7-night holiday, leaving Saturdays from late November through late April.

You have a choice of three tours: (1) 3 nights in Havana, 4 nights at Santa Maria del Mar (a beach resort not too far from Havana); (2) 3 nights at Santa Maria, 4 nights in Havana (in that order); or (3) 6 nights at Varadero Beach (a beautiful beach resort quite a distance from Havana), 1 night in Havana. Highlights on all tours include visits to city landmarks in Havana and the show at the old Cabaret Tropicana. The price is $669.00 per person (for two), or $757.00 (single traveler), and includes your round-trip flight out of New York, all meals in Cuba (including all the beer and soft drinks you want), good hotels (such as the Havana Libre, formerly the Hilton), entertainment, land tours, etc. (You are permitted to wander freely in Havana and at the beach resorts, but cannot travel throughout the island without special permission.) Canadians, who value the dollar realistically—as compared with their American counterparts, who are usually wasteful with vacation funds—consider such a holiday a great deal, particularly when compared with the cost of a stint in Puerto Rico. But Canadians and Europeans are more tolerant of any lack of "creature comforts" than Americans—who are not only used to, but demand quality hotels, food, service, etc.

Havana Today

Typically Russian, maintenance people—Cuban trainees included—are terribly unskilled, as a visit to any new hotel in Russia will prove. Havana is a fading queen who has fallen apart at the seams. The hotels are old—which means that there are always problems with electricity and plumbing. The hot water, even in the best hotels, is warm, not hot, and salty. Air-conditioning may or may not work. Forget about telephones. A TV in your room? Ridiculous!

Actually, tourists—all tourists—have it a lot better than the Cubans themselves. Food is rationed for citizens, even when money is available. Not so for tourists, whose group meals are good. Every night throughout Cuba neighborhoods are blacked out in order to help preserve the old GE generators, now failing and held together with spit by Russian engineers; the hotels are spared this inconvenience.

Let's just say that Cuba is now somewhat primitive. If you care to read about it, I suggest you have your local bookseller order a copy of Fred Ward's "Inside Cuba Today" (Crown Publishers, New York, $12.95). In his book, Mr. Ward covers the whole scene, including politics and tourism.

In spite of recent attempts by government officials in both countries to patch up old grievances, relations between the U.S. and Cuba are poor at this time. Last January Castro cursed Carter in an emotional speech. A week later Caribbean Holidays informed a lot of people booked on tours in March that the trips had been cancelled "... because of lack of interest." In fact, I believe a lot of people who had booked did the initial cancelling after Castro's tirade—for fear of getting politically involved in a country that is in the hands of a dictator. It's scary. (But please remember, what applies to Americans has absolutely nothing to do with Canadians or other travelers.)

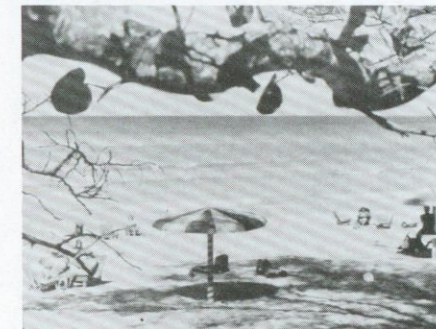

The problem—as far as I'm concerned—seems to be Fidel's machismo. If he's allowed to be papa, the big boss, the decision-maker, the man who has the upper-hand in dealing with the U.S.—then some sort of a workable relationship with the U.S. will come about. When he doesn't get his way, or is made to feel that he's not the man in charge, he'll use his big mouth to tell us—and to reaffirm in his mind—that he's still boss as far as Cuba is concerned.

Never will he admit that just possibly all his decisions have not been right, that his country is in bad financial trouble and that his goals have not been achieved. He says the people own the land, and yet they work for the government. They are not permitted to own businesses (except for shoeshine men, who are permitted to enter into a kind of "partnership" with the government). Even when they earn enough money, the average workers can't do much with it because food and goods are strictly rationed. And there are spies—called CDR's (Committees for the Defense of the Revolution)—all over the place, about 34,000 out on the streets and throughout the island every night. Originally, their function was to keep an eye out for invasions and the like, but now they spy on their neighbors to keep tabs on their political leanings, and also keep an eye out for burglars (there's a lot of breaking and entering—and carrying-off of TV sets, etc., throughout the country). Unfortunately, many times an innocent gets caught—and has a tough time explaining that he was, for example, trying to woo his sweetheart in a dark alley.

And this leads to gay life.

Of course, there are gay Cubans (most of them are in Miami!)—and many of them are in Cuban jails. There are special prisons for homosexuals, and life can be miserable for an inmate—because of ruling (wicked!) queens, forced relationships, etc. And homosexuals are looked upon as "women" by society—which gives license to any tough macho guard to screw the hell out of you if he so desires. Yet, the average gay Cuban who is indiscreet with Cubanos or foreign tourists usually expresses the opinion that he is not worried about being sent to prison if caught, because it's like a gay holiday of sorts—and a kind of "heaven" where he can suck and fuck half the day. (God help the unfortunate American who's used to clean sheets if he's ever caught, sent to such a prison and used by Castro as a political pawn while he waits his time out—grubbing for food, coming down with dysentery and parasites, warding off being raped by repulsive aggressors, and not being able to speak the language!)

Cuba's Beaches

That all Cubans are suspect and watched by the CDR's is a fact. That gay Cubans are carefully watched is also a fact. That all Americans are also carefully watched, mainly for political reasons, is another fact. That gay tourists—particularly Americans—are watched is still another fact. And if you think that the Cuban government does not accumulate a lot of information on all foreigners coming in before they arrive (through questionnaires you fill out when booking a tour, and through information readily available from U.S. government agencies) then you are being naive.

There are some gay meeting spots—such as the ice-cream stand in the park diagonally across from the Havana Libre Hotel; it is especially busy late at night, and the m.o. is to connect and then be invited home. Heaven help you if a CDR is watching and follows you, and then tries to make points for himself by getting something on you—at a time when Castro would like having a few Americans to toy with. Homosexuality is strictly against the law in Cuba—and you are subject to their laws, just as U.S. citizens are subject to that country's laws—as was so graphically seen in the movie, "Midnight Express."

You can also meet on any main street, at night mainly, in Havana; in any movie-house; and outside Havana, at the beach resorts—where you are as likely to meet other Americans, Canadians or Europeans as Cubans; making it with other tourists in the privacy of your hotel room is a lot safer than going home with a Cuban, or inviting him to your room. There is no prostitution in the country.

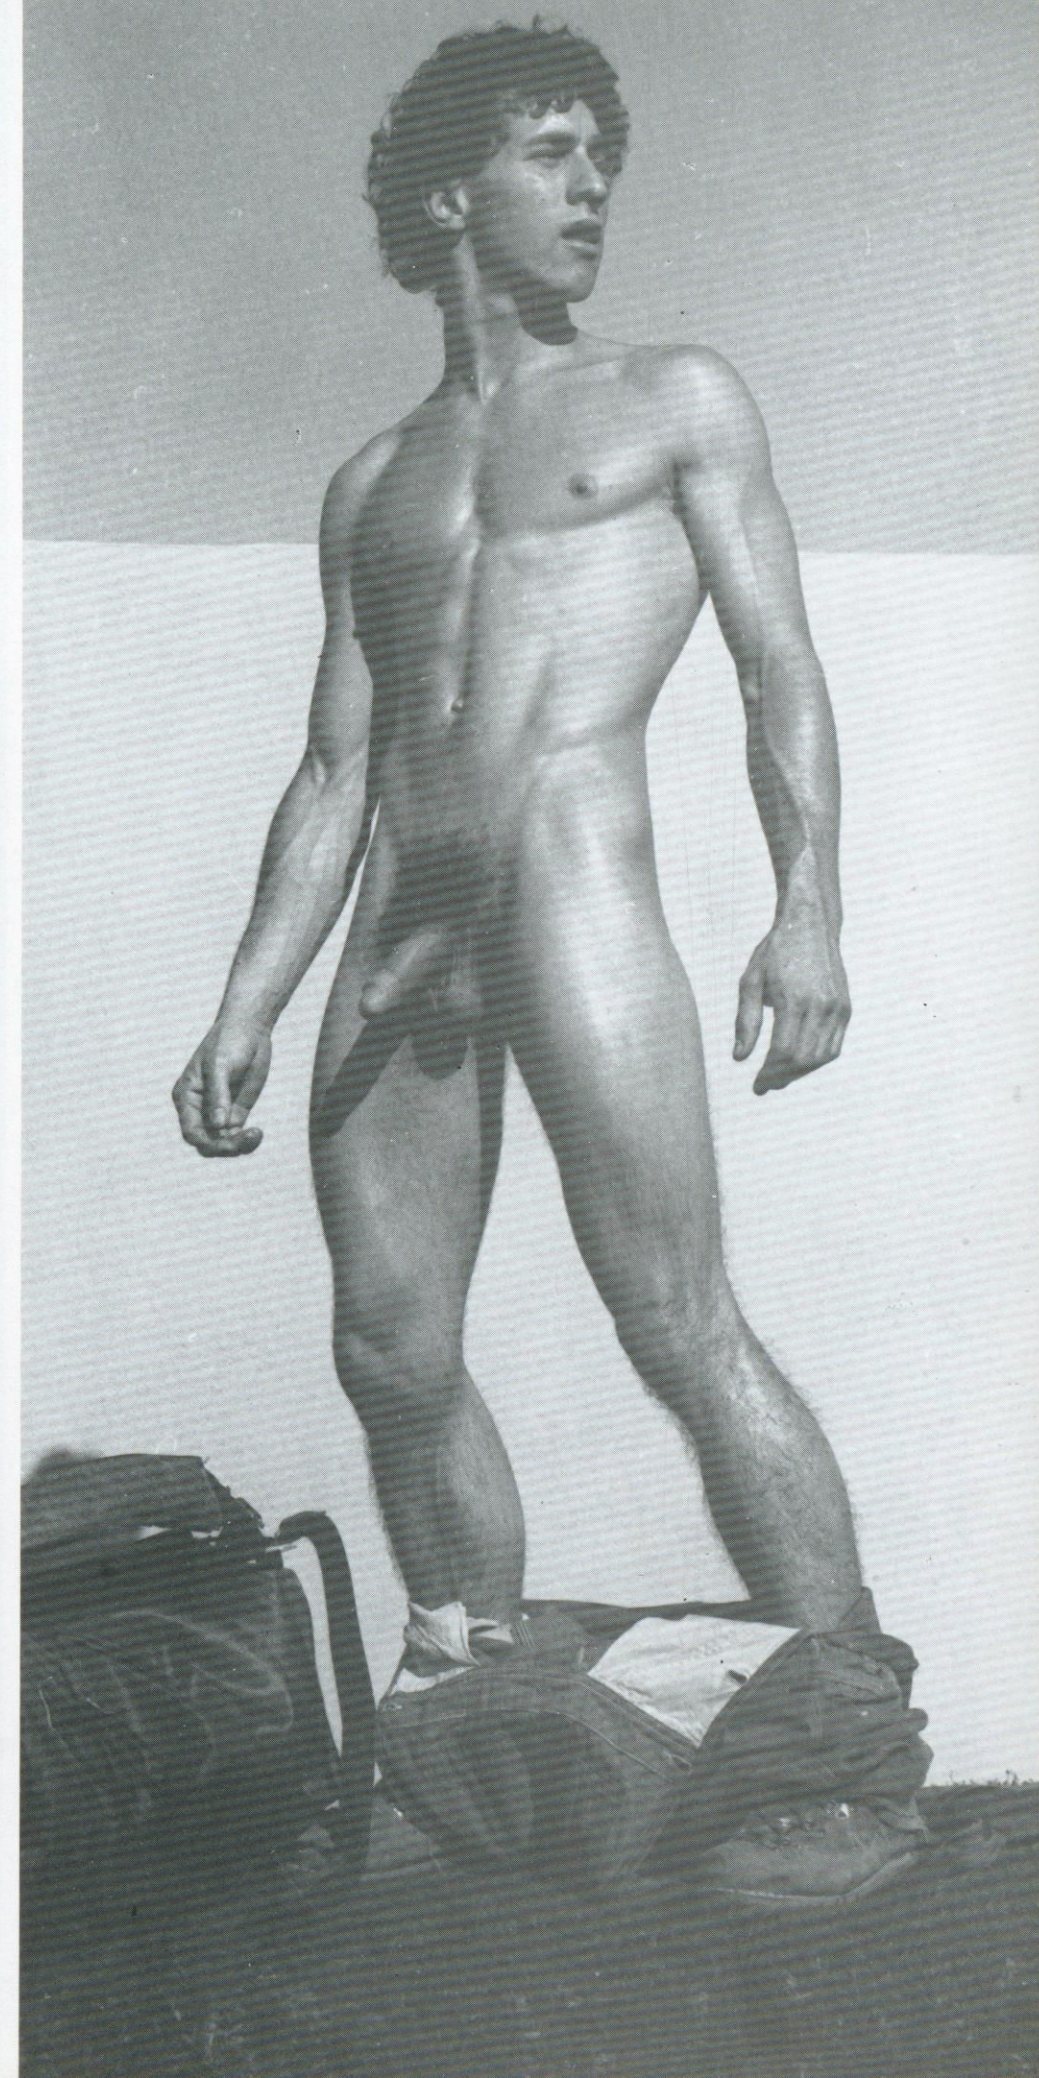

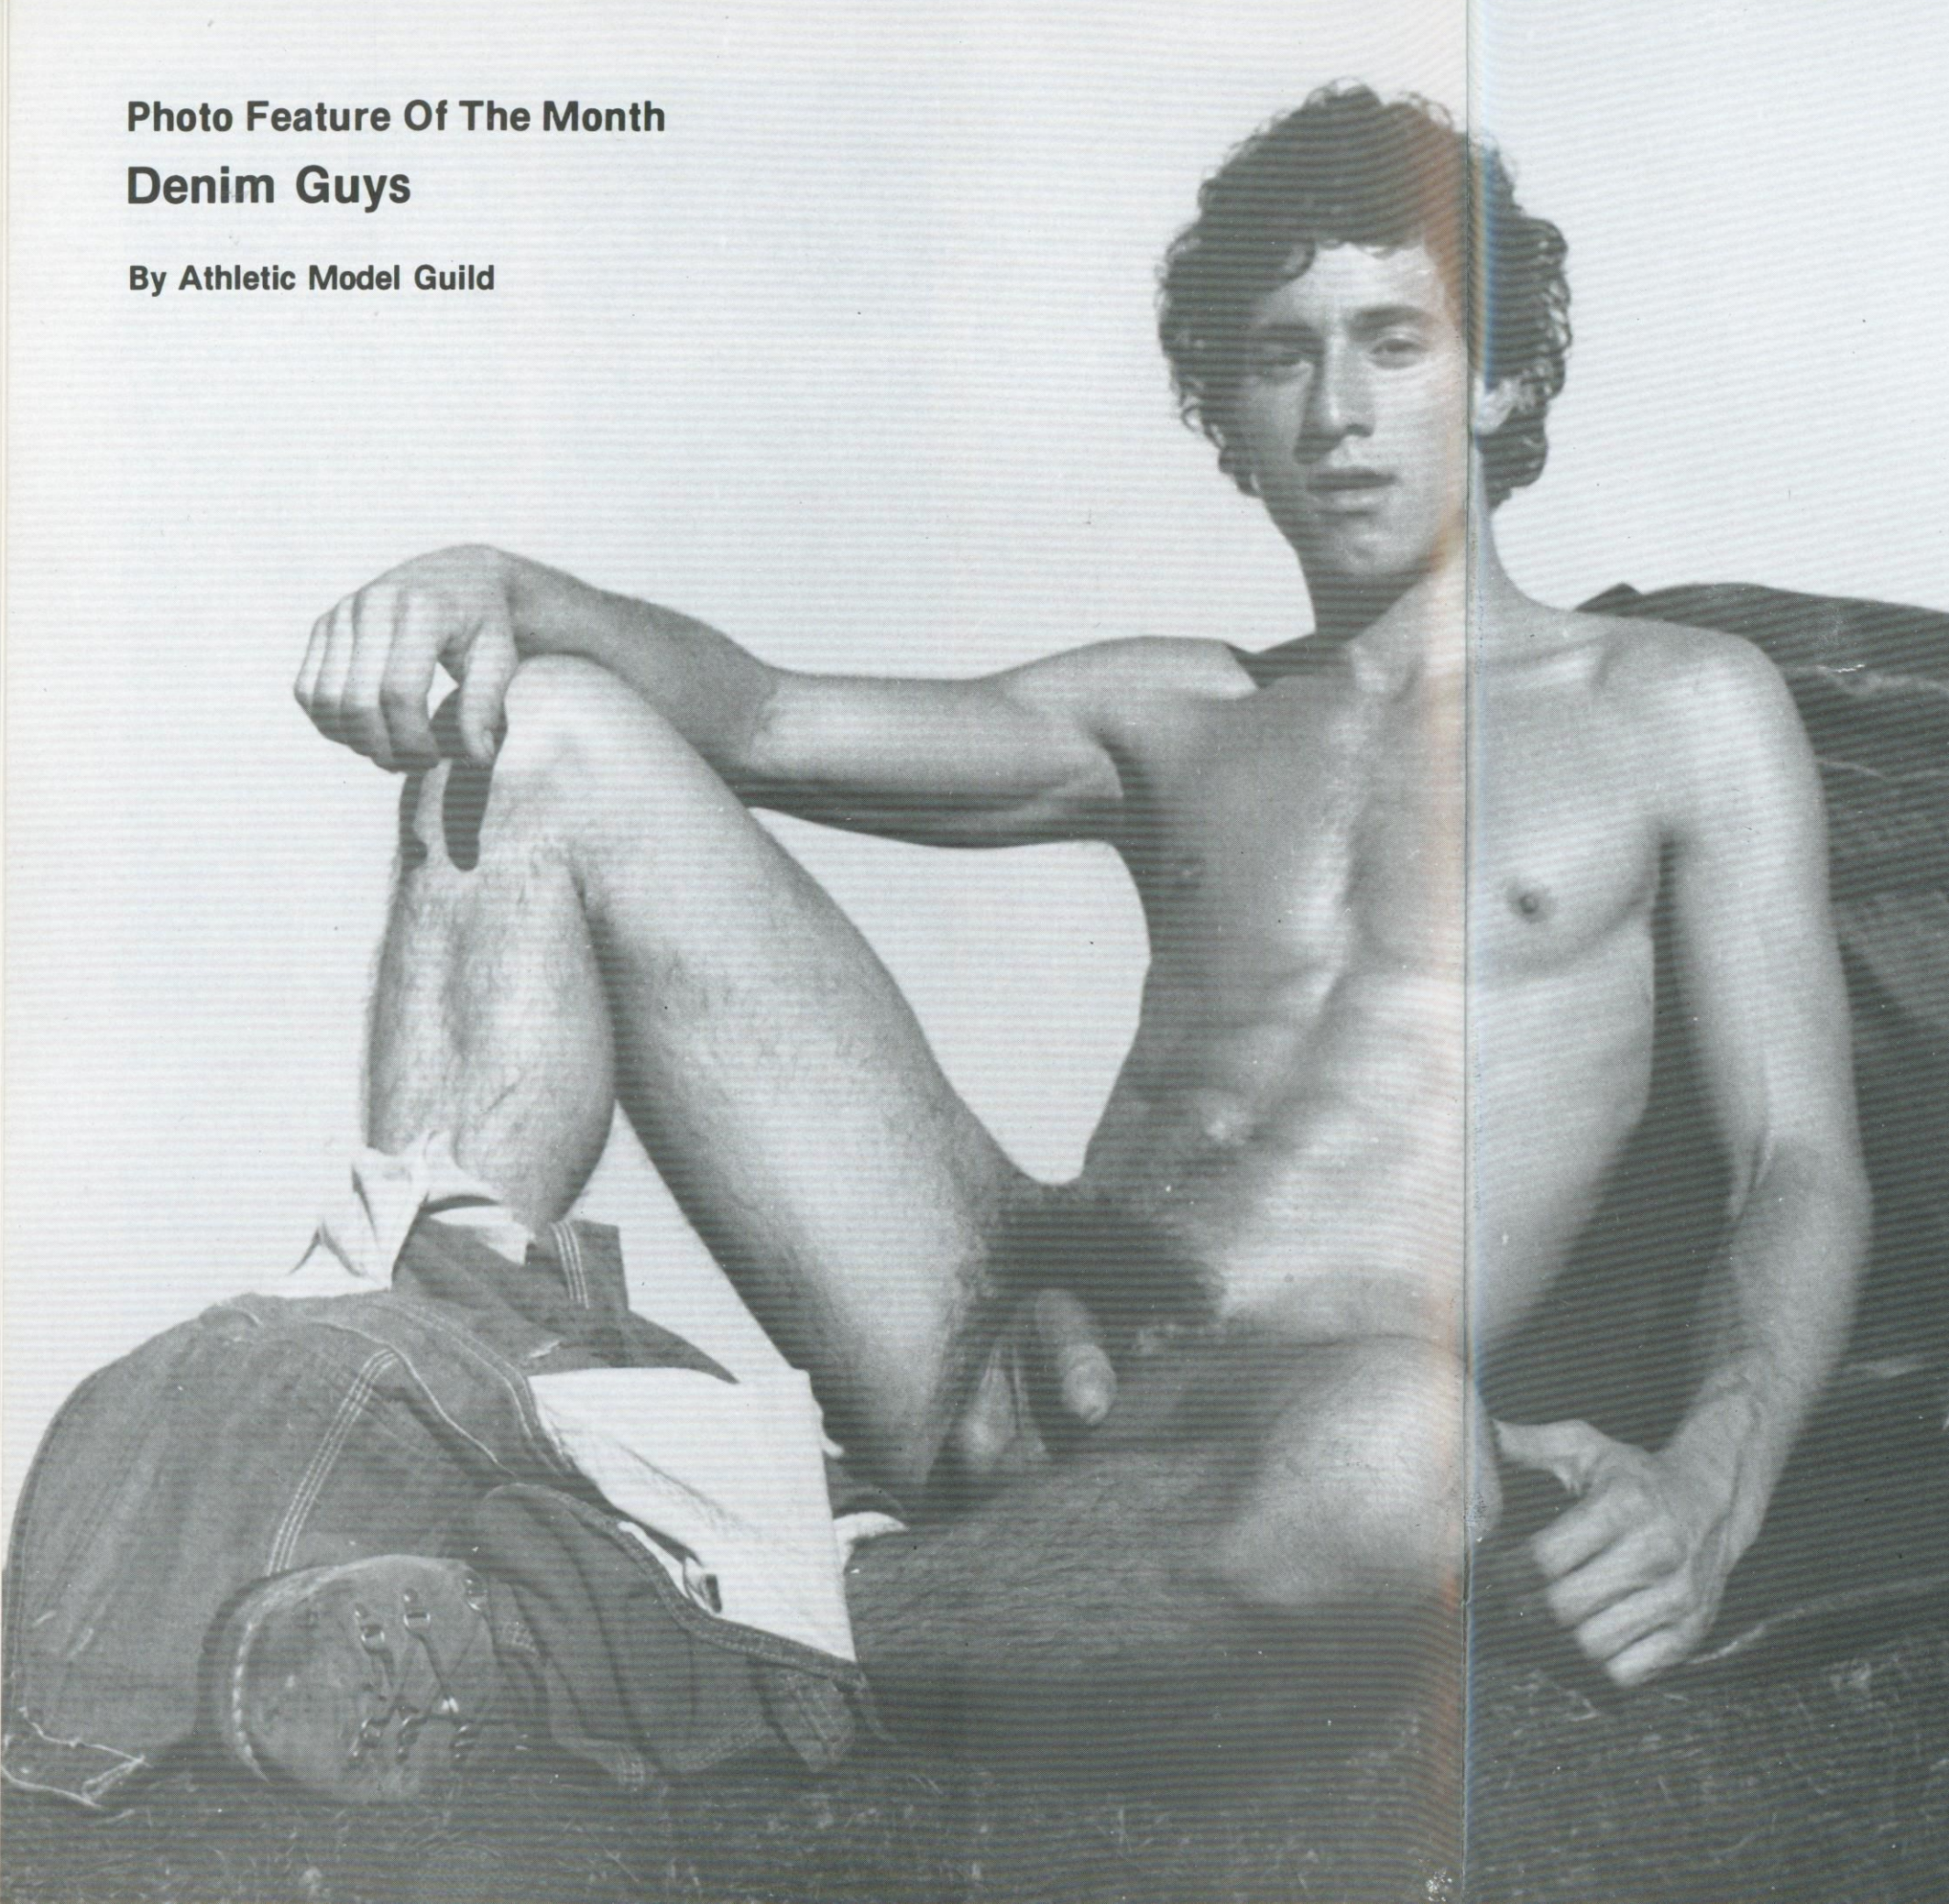

Are Cubans attractive? Yes, but Cubans—unlike Puerto Ricans—don't always have that "Latin macho" look. The men are slender when they're young, but tend to get heavy in their mid-twenties. They don't look as "Spanish" as their Puerto Rican neighbors—whom we are so used to seeing in this country, and who provided the model for that "macho look" among gay guys which is so common now ... the sleek body and handsome, moustached face. Cubans look Spanish, Black ... and every other nationality too; Puerto Ricans look Spanish, sometimes Black, and seldom like other nationalities (excepting a small group on the western tip of the island, who are blond and have Nordic blood in their veins).

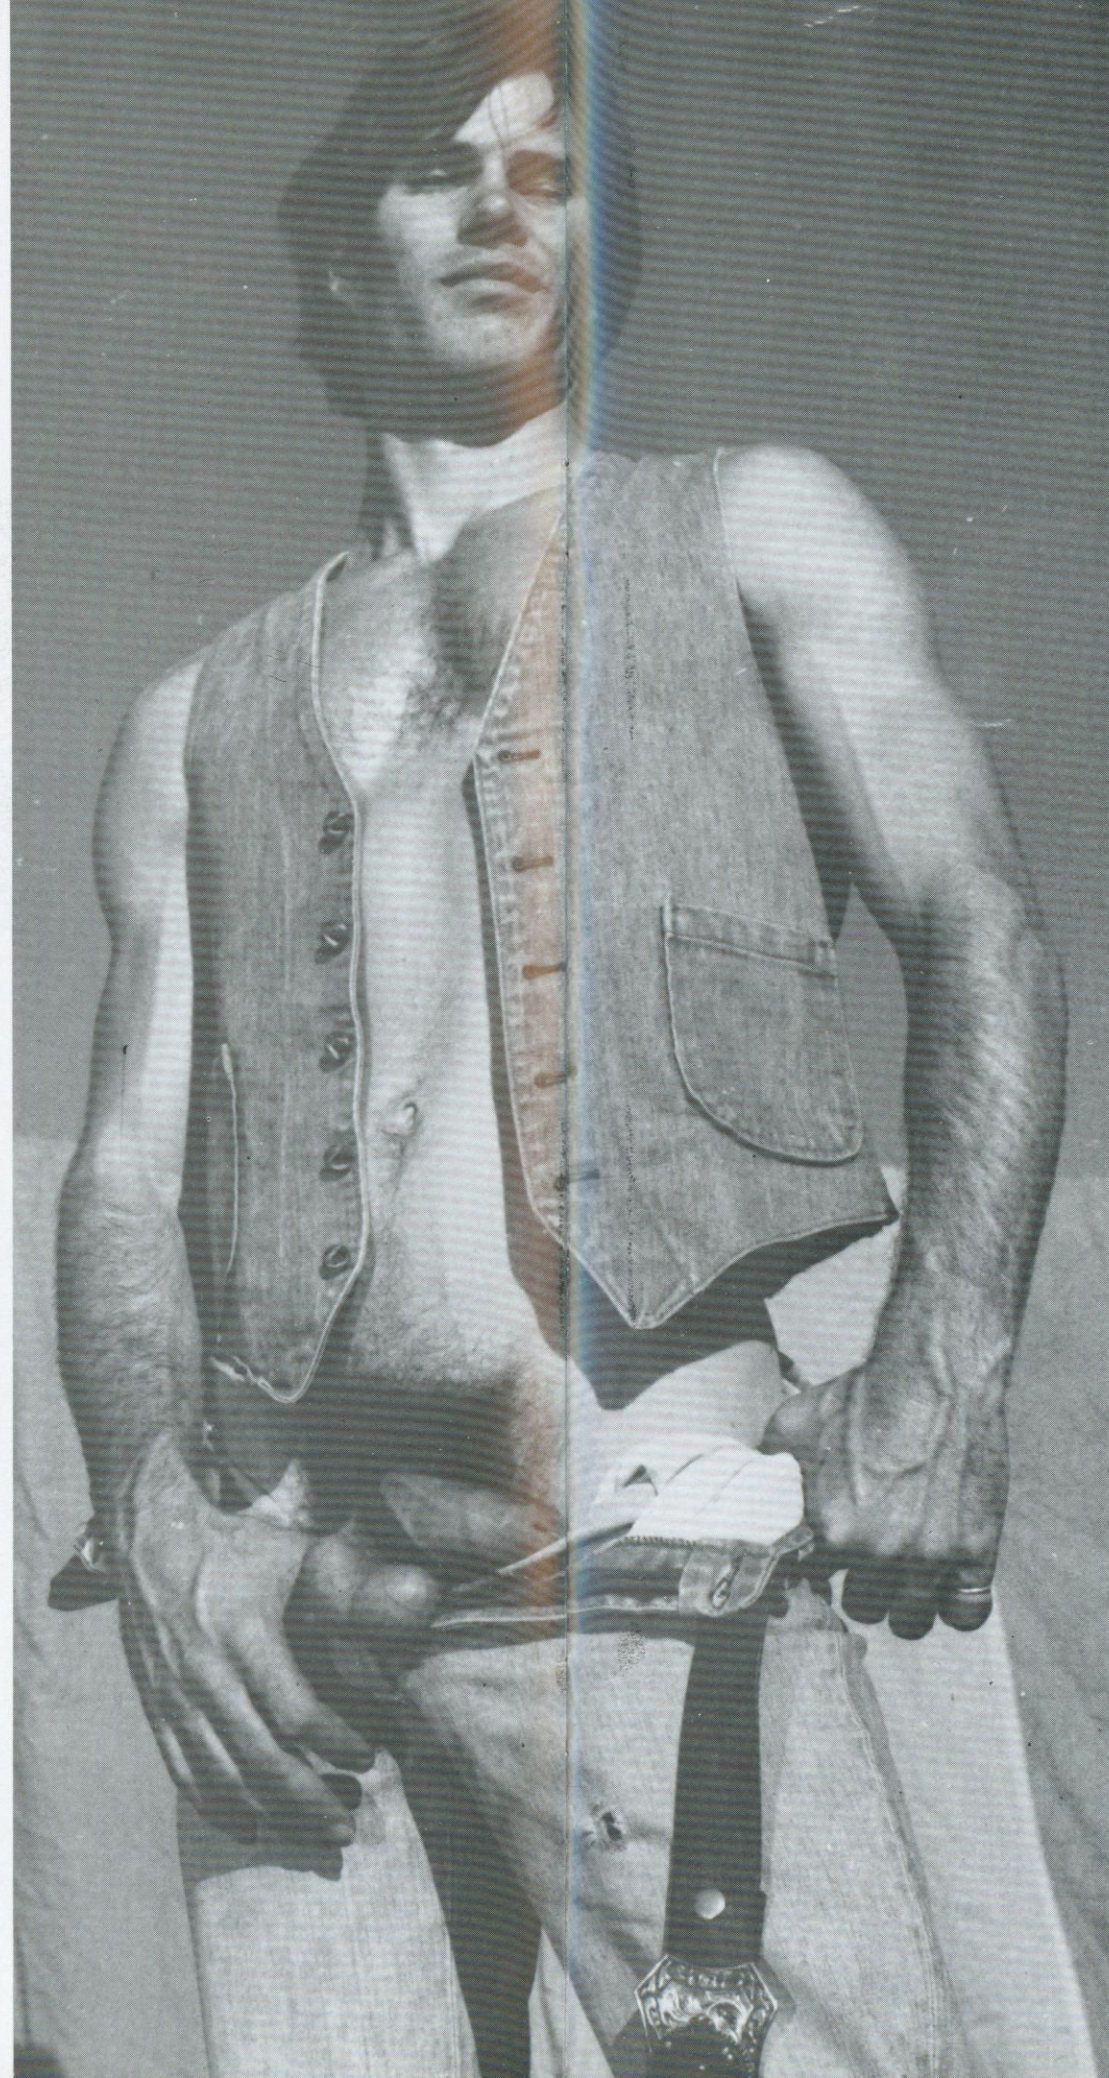

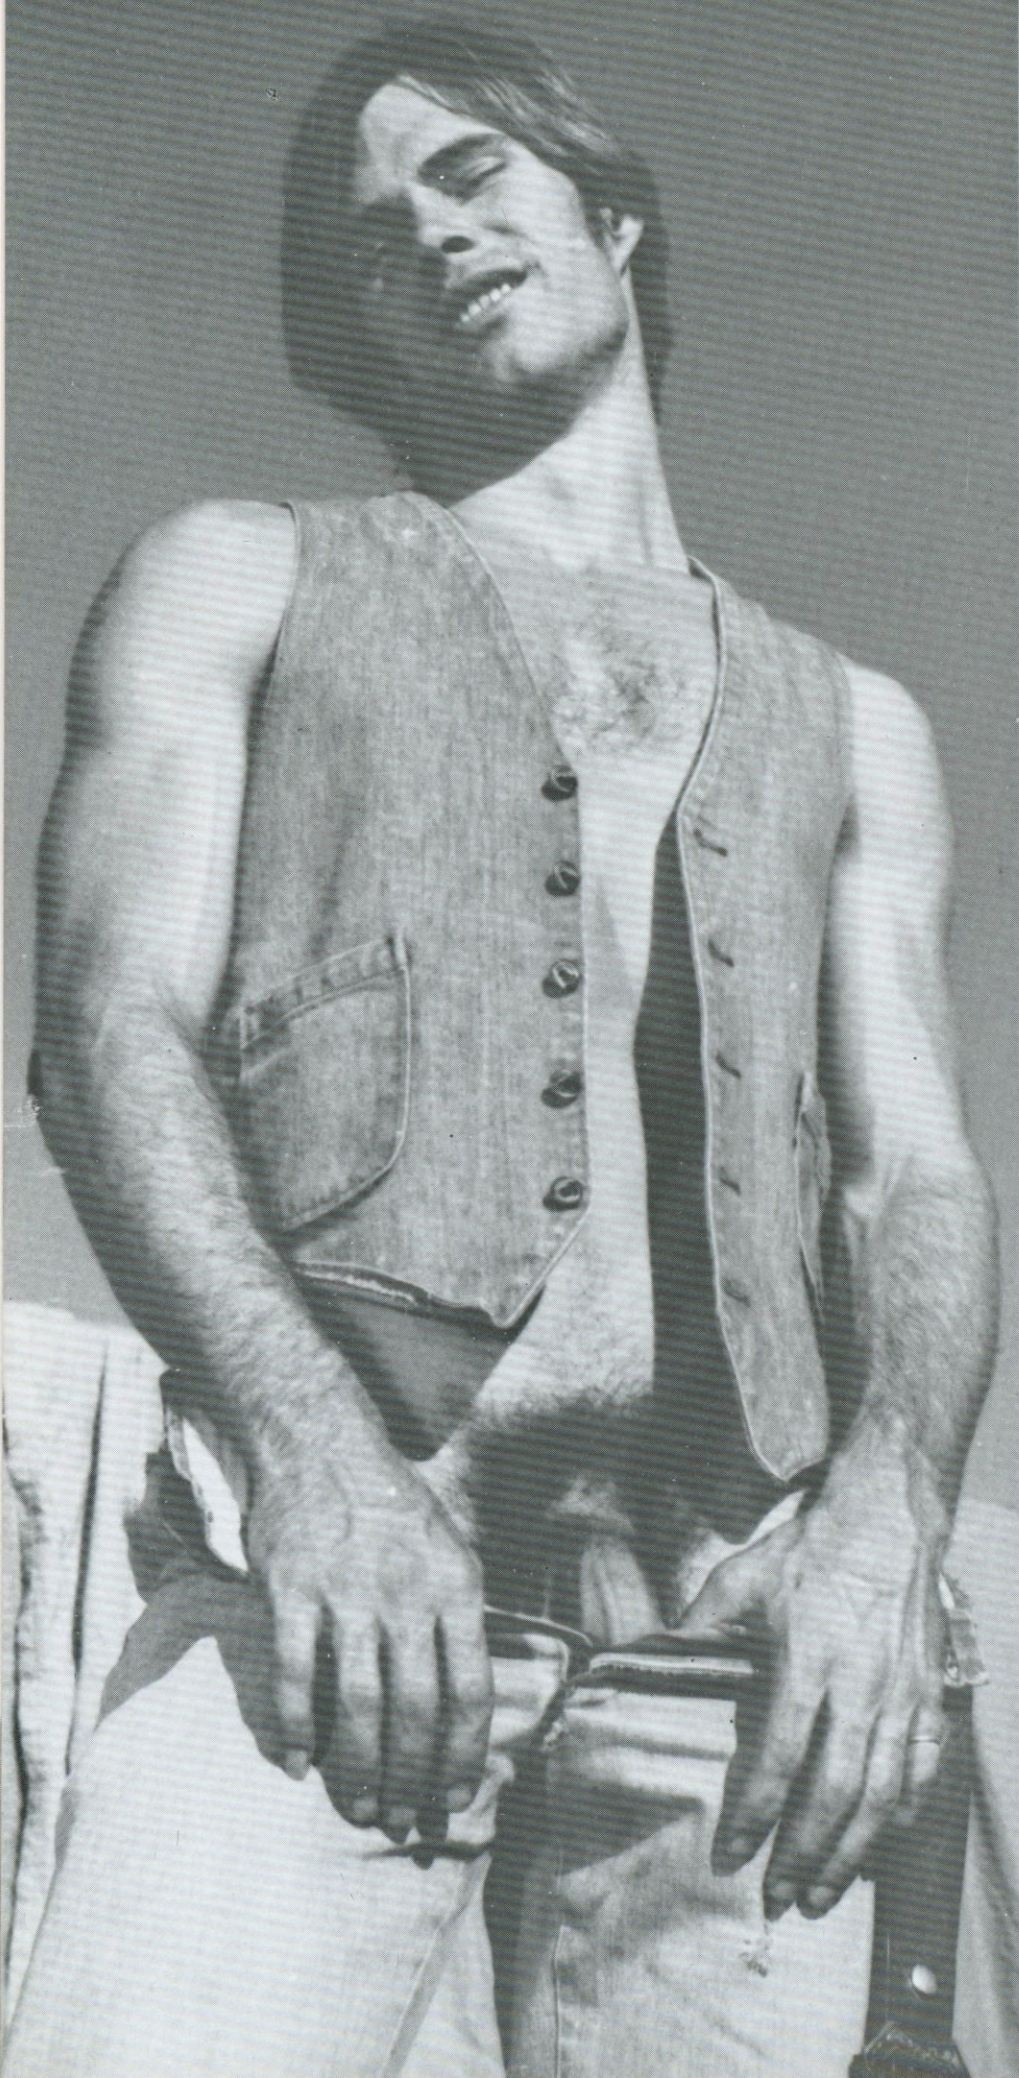

I've made comparisons between Cuba and Cubans, and Puerto Rico and Puerto Ricans throughout this article, for a reason. Cuba was beautiful in its time. In my opinion, that time has passed and will never return.

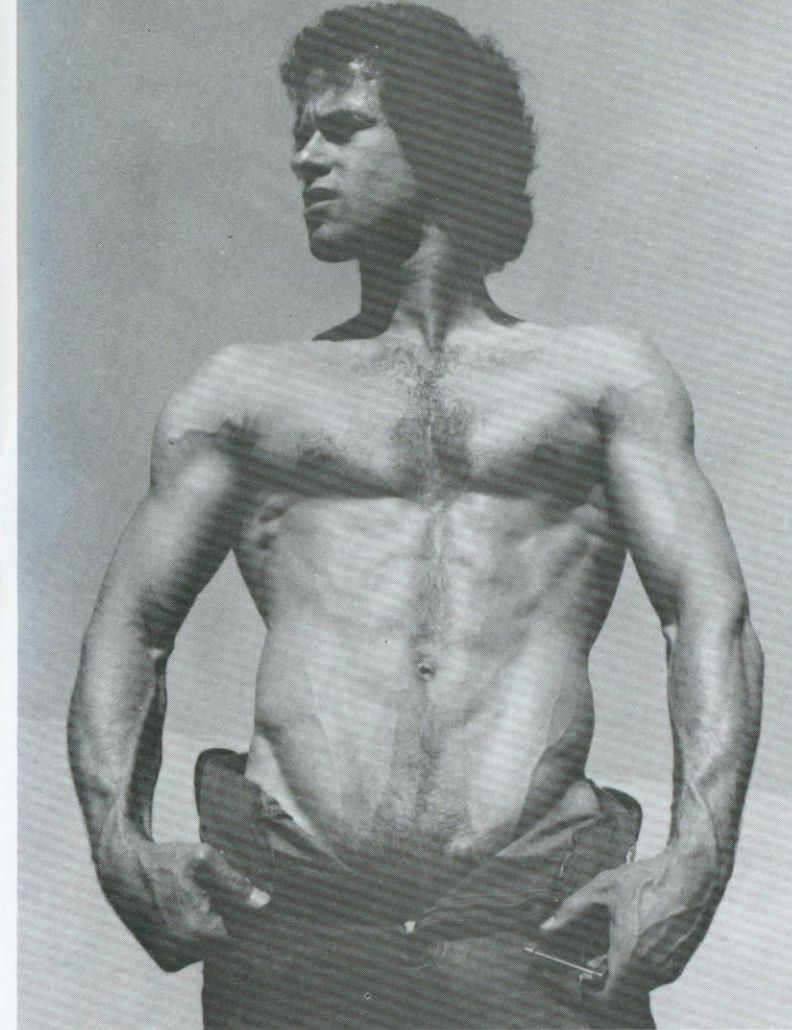

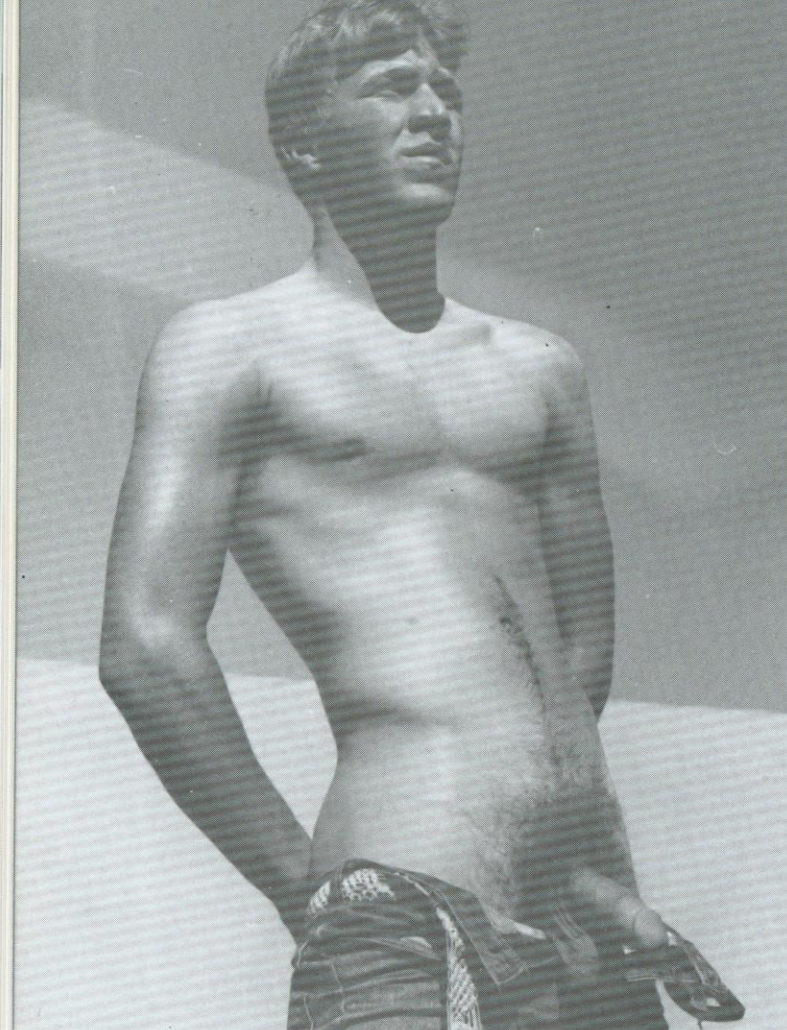

Puerto Rico is in its time now—and the sooner those who wooed Cuba in the old days come to realize that and come to love Puerto Rico, the happier they'll be. We here in the U.S. know the Puerto Rican look—and mistakingly assume that the same desirable look is what we'll come upon in Cuba. Not so. We Americans are curious about new places, and Cuba is a new place—but not ready for the world at this time. And she may never be ready. When she died she was beautiful. Puerto Rico received life from her death and has become the New Cuba. And for the time being, for years and perhaps forever, the gay tourist should let Cuba rest in peace.

Seal the larger envelope, address to us (QQ Publishing Co., Inc., 450 Seventh Ave. Suite 602, New York, N.Y. 10001), and affix proper postage for mailing. Make certain that if several envelopes are enclosed that enough postage is used to cover the weight, and do not use one of our postage-free business-reply envelopes for sending us such mail (we will not process mail arriving in our business envelopes, sorry). 5. You will hear directly from the advertiser and from then on correspond directly; please do not ask us to act in your behalf at that point. (We advise you to use caution with strangers you make contact with.)

HOW THE COMPUTERIZED CODE WORKS

Advertisers who use their own address and/or phone number do not require a code or our $1 forwarding service. Those desiring a code so that we may forward mail are assigned a number which remains in our files (nobody but us ever sees your name, address or code number . . . we guarantee privacy). We then record this code and your address in our electronic computer. When mail arrives at our offices for forwarding your code is entered into our computer and in seconds your name and address are placed on the letters bearing your code. Postage is applied by us and your letters are on their way . . . thus guaranteeing you privacy (those answering your ad never see your address until you write directly to them after receiving their letters, if you wish to do so) and speed.

NON-SUBSCRIBERS AND BUSINESSMEN NOTE

If you are a non-subscriber or have a business-type ad (for the sale of merchandise, a service, etc.) you may purchase ad space on a one-time-per-payment basis at $1 per word (name and address count as 2 words). You may use your name, address and/or phone number or we will assign you a code (see details above). Personal ads will appear normally; business ads will appear in white type on a black panel at no extra charge. If your ad is personal please be sure and include your age. Send all ads to: QQ Publishing Co., Inc., Suite 602, 450 Seventh Ave., New York, N.Y. 10001.

"THE GREEK BOY" TERRY CLOTH BIKINI Only $7.50

2 FOR $14.00! 3 FOR $20.00!

THE GREEK BOY is made of fine terry cloth that clings without pulling. The front is cut low, utilizing a codpiece-like panel to create a U-drop, thereby accentuating the crotch . . . and the seat is cut FULL, so unlike most bikinis and flimsy swimsuits the seams fall where they should and don't cut across the middle of your ass. We carry STRIPES ONLY (no solid colors). Some stripes are broad, some thin, some muted—all colorful on a background of white. When you order INDICATE YOUR FAVORITE COLORS and we will send the stripe combination that includes the color(s) you want. If you order more than one GREEK BOY we will not duplicate the design. Give your correct size (using your underwear as a guide)—SMALL, 28-30; MEDIUM, 32-34; LARGE, 36-38. Provide true size since swimsuits are a sanitary item and are not returnable. We ship via fast UPS (when a street address is provided) or insured parcel post (p.o. boxes). Seen here is QQ/BODY/CIAO! publisher George Desantis in a deep navy GREEK BOY.

The Greatest Invention Since The Human Mouth

ACCU-JAC

New Variable Speed Model

If you are into masturbation then ACCU-JAC is for you. It is a professionally engineered massaging device that took four years of research and development.

ACCU-JAC uses alternating air pressure to move a smooth massaging membrane on the erect penis. The stroking motion is total and incorporates pressurized air flow which produces suction and compression to drive the massaging sleeve back and forth, thus approximating actual fellatio. This total massage combined with gentle suction results in violent climax.

No electrical parts ever touch you. ACCU-JAC is completely safe and entirely harmless. It is gentler than the hand or actual fellatio. A warranty is included to protect all electrical and mechanical parts.

The basic unit includes everything you need to use ACCU-JAC . . . there are no extras to buy. Additional sleeves for a variety of unusual sensations are available for later purchase. They are detailed in literature which accompanies ACCU-JAC and also in our 1978 Catalog advertised elsewhere in this magazine.

It is crucial that you furnish exact measurements of your erect penis to ensure perfect fit of the sleeve sent with your unit. If you are purchasing ACCU-JAC with a friend order an additional sleeve for the second person if his size is different from yours and/or you intend to use ACCU-JAC simultaneously with a T-connection accessory (see coupon).

If you wish to learn more about ACCU-JAC before purchasing see our detailed report in the February 1975 QQ Magazine. Send $3.50 ($4.50 in Canada & Mexico; $5.00 all other countries) for a copy; $1 for a Xerox copy of the report. Address on coupon.

Our prices include all shipping charges and taxes where applicable. We ship via insured parcel post. Cartons are sturdy and carefully packed and bear no revealing markings. U.S. residents desiring air service please add $10 to your order. A money-order or charge expedites shipment. Sorry, no C.O.D.'s. Price reflects manufacturer's 1978 increase. You must be over 21 to order.

1979 GAY TRAVEL DIRECTORY

From The Editors Of Ciao!—The Most Celebrated Gay Travel Magazine In The World—A 1979 International Travel Directory Containing Nearly 4,000 Up-To-Date And Accurate Keyed Names And Addresses Of Gay Hotels, Bars, Baths, Movie Houses, Book/Sex Shops, Meeting Places And Action Spots Throughout The U.S.A., Canada, Mexico, Central America, The Caribbean, South America, Europe, Africa, The Middle East, Asia, And The Pacific . . . Your Passport To Gay Adventure In A Compact Booklet Small Enough To Fit In Your Pocket!

THE MOST ACCURATE GAY TRAVEL DIRECTORY IN THE WORLD

Nearly all existing gay travel directories are "rip-offs" of guides published years ago—providing information which is no longer valid. The editors of our gay travel magazine span the world—constantly gathering information for Ciao! They have prepared our 1979 gay travel directory—which we call "Private Stock." It contains nearly 4,000 accurate and up-to-date names and addresses of gay establishments and meeting places everywhere in the world—conveniently arranged by country and city in alphabetical order. By utilizing a concise system of "keys" we are able to present detailed information about each listing; the keys are so arranged that you can instantly interpret them and learn everything you need to know—whether a place is entirely gay, what you will encounter—young guys, old guys, sex, no booze, entertainment, food, lesbians, hustlers, muggers, cops, even dangerous animals (in jungle meat-racks!). And we dare to bare it all—including johns on college campuses, in subways and department stores that swing. By using small type which is easy to read we are able to cram all this valuable information in a compact booklet which is securely stapled together in magazine form and small enough (3x5) to fit in your shirt pocket. Its cover is durable and leather-grained with absolutely no "tell-tale" printing so that discreet travelers can use it anywhere. Plus other features such as where to look for sex in college towns, and how much hustlers are paid—and how to handle them. Published annually—"Private Stock" is the only gay travel directory you need . . . the only one you will ever want. It is your personal address book for hot times! Sent via certified 1st class.
