ON THE COVER

In this design for the future, Richard D. Curtin illustrates gays and lesbians from all walks of life in hopes that in the next century we will not be stereotyped, but viewed as contributors toward the whole. AIDS was not overlooked, as it is his belief that we will have been victorious. Richard believes that by the next century we, as gays and lesbians, will be Proud, United and Free. Richard can be reached at 214-565-0111 for graphic design and illustration.

SPECIAL THANKS TO
Dru, Jack, Mary & Prozac®

Perhaps the '90s will be remembered as the decade of themes. Theme parks. Theme parties. Theme campaigns (remember Bill, the saxophone and Fleetwood Mac). Conformity swept me away on a search for a theme for this edition of the LAMBDA PAGES. I found myself weary looking back in time. I'll save that for therapy. So risking a little predictability, I chose a futuristic theme -- Gay and Lesbian Life in the Year 2,000. Upon first reflection of this future date, my head filled with grand illusions. Commercial space flight. An end to hunger, child abuse, and homelessness. Total disarmament of nuclear weapons. Global peace. Oh, and I think I'll buy the world a Coke®.

Really. 2,000 is only six year's away. About 2,190 days away to be more exact. So let's ponder the year 2,000. Will the sodomy law of Texas still exist? I hope not. But then again this is Texas. Will we be driving cars powered by natural gas? Will there be any natural gas left? Will we still proudly, yet subtly tag our automobiles with variations of the rainbow flag, pink triangle, and lambda? How long will we be looking for these telltale signs in a desperate attempt to identify each other?

Will there be more empty closets? Will we file joint tax returns with our partners? Will we serve our country, out and proud? Will we adopt children? Will our children read about Harvey Milk, Stonewall, and the cure for AIDS in their history books? Will a gay man be honored as Scout Master of the year? Will the MCI friends and family commercials feature two lesbian moms picking up the phone to call their son? I hope so.

I also hope I'll be able to write 2000 on my check to the dry cleaners without sounding off in a bad colloquy about how I'm still scratching out 1999 in the middle of July.

Here at the LAMBDA REPUBLIC, we had fun with our futuristic theme. You'll find evidence of it throughout the LAMBDA PAGES in "High Hopes For The Year 2,000." Little one-liners in the tradition of Lambda Trivia (Volume I of the LAMBDA PAGES). Some are serious. Some are stereotypical. Most are just silly. A reflection, you'd say of the humor and wit for which gay and lesbian people are so well known. We do know how to laugh and have fun. When we're not raising money, sewing a quilt or visiting a sick friend.

So I hope, no I highly hope you'll chuckle, chortle or maybe even belly laugh a little upon perusal of the new LAMBDA PAGES. Oh ya, and don't forget to find an even greater selection of gay and lesbian businesses in the LAMBDA PAGES.

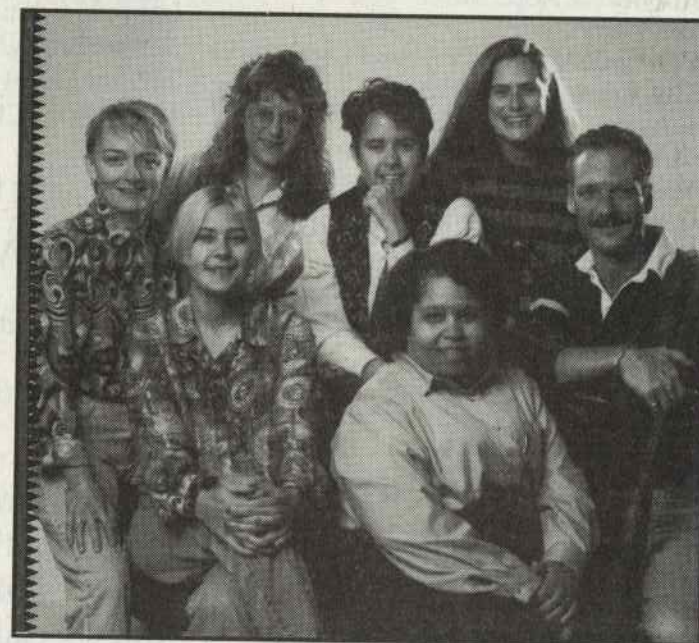

With Pride,

Kay Christian

Volume III of the LAMBDA PAGES is dedicated to my dear friend, Dan Edwards, who helped me kick off the inaugural edition of the Lambda Pages in the Spring of 1992. His energy, laughter, and comic commentary on life still linger in my heart and in my work.

Lesbians & Gay Men Enjoy A Unique Kind of Friendship

by Beverly Fletcher

Ted always had a critical eye turned to my makeup and wardrobe. His talent for accessorizing called attention to my shortcomings in the fashion arena. Once he threatened to withdraw his savings from the bank to dress me correctly. I was spared that humiliation though when he accepted himself as a better model. Eventually his makeup collection dwarfed mine, and he sometimes wore the cutest diamond drop earring that he'd borrowed from his mother and, of course, never would return.

Larry decorated my house entirely. Every time he came to visit he brought some little bauble to add taste to my backyard or my home's interior: a chic table centerpiece, custom-fitted stained-glass designs, a couch, landscaping ...

Given that brief caplet of historical perspective, you'll understand that if I appear to be "femme"-ishly decked, if my home seems tastefully posh, it's because of my gay guy friends. They practiced on me.

For my part, in payment for the refinements they bestowed on me, I gave them back vital pieces of themselves. I served as a mirror into their own souls. I helped peel away for them the gender constraints imposed institutionally, the ones that devalued them for their feminine interests. Quite simply, I appreciated in them what our misogynistic society would deter. Their feminine facets to me were more magnificent than their prescribed manliness, a better fit for them, and I was one of a sparse few pointing that out.

When I was a youngster I ran with the guys. I lost all my baby teeth by wrestling with the boys in the neighborhood. In high school I filled my car with randy, gangly guys and stalked the East Texas dirt roads for mud flats to test the prowess of my driving stunts. My car back then was always caked shamefully with layers of slimy evidence of my macho daring, the interior lightly infused with my cohorts' cologne and the scent of cheap wine.

Running with the guys provided power and freedom that were missing at the slumber parties gathering little girls together. Even the barely-daring play of little girls was marred by dreary warnings and urban legends to hold us in check. In the company of guys, as a rare exception, I could enjoy the range of movement accorded them by the power of their gender.

I breached the worlds of little girls and little boys because I was of both, self-awarded dual citizenship. I could giggle with the girls as naturally as I could tussle with the boys at play. I was allowed that freedom only because no one noticed it.

It does not escape my notice that my gay male friends must pay more for their freedoms than what is demanded of me for mine - that they are punished more harshly, shunned more viciously, risk violence in retribution. In our male-dominated society, women can push the boundaries quietly without calling attention to themselves because women escape attention altogether. But the guys who tread too lightly, trespassing into womanly territory, are lynched as traitors.

Within our social structures, the lynchings are far fewer for women who might find urgent motivation to press forward into the male domain, to experiment in realms reserved for men, to taste the power and authority men claim.

In this world, a man who explores femininity gives away his male privileges, steps off the towering ladder of male status, exchanges prerogative for a devalued berth. Ted and Larry and my other gay guy friends who think cosmetics form an interesting art, who find creative outlets in flower arranging and home decoration, who cultivate their nurturing and sensitive qualities, pay homage in its purest form to womanliness. Pursuing feminine qualities when there is no prestige to be gained from it forms an admiring declaration of the value of women - it is a gift of affirmation my gay pals present me, sharing with me womanly rites and passages, welcoming me into the world of men.

My gay guy friends now join me and my lesbian friends as partners in that feat of bridging gender gaps, of rebelling against constraints, of creatively redefining what it means to be a man or a woman.

Larry filmed a home movie where he dressed up as his rendition of me: a girlish pinafore, Shirley Temple curls, a comical shock of red outlining his lips. His full beard and hairy legs made an amusing point - we are a combination of gender traits; we are man and woman interwoven, defined more by what the institutions allow us than according to who we really are or what we are capable of being.

Larry, imbued with male daring, encouraged by me as an ally, explored the buried parts of himself and helped me to explore mine.

It is in the company of lesbians I find healing warmth, the bond of shared travails and triumphs that form the indomitable woman's spirit. And it is in the company of my gay guy friends, I find a pact to dare and challenge, to test the boundaries of our capabilities, to explore like the teenage boys who filled my car those years ago, cruising for muddy fields to master and adventures to amuse us.

Money Makes The World Go 'Round

GAY GREENBACKS

by Kay Vinson

Money is moolah is bucks is bread is dough. It's the legal tender we use to maneuver through life, securing housing with it, putting clothes in our closets with it, and buying food with it.

Money buys us health insurance. It's good for a trip around the world or a vacation in the Caribbean. Money decorates our homes. Money makes sure we have wheels.

Money is control. It's also power, freedom, and flight. Money is access to the powers-that-be. Money is lending a helping hand. Money is pledging support. Money is a gesture of kindness.

When money talks, people listen. While more may be better, it still doesn't matter how much you have, it's how and where you spend it that counts.

Every time we spend money we make a very important statement because we are choosing which business or corporation we will and will not support. With consumers being the lifeblood of business, it stands to reason that our dollars mean something. They pull some weight. They get attention. Our dollars speak to the heart of the matter: Moolah is Power. But I don't think most of us understand that, having been numbed by so many therapeutic shopping trips to the mall.

Hypothetical. What do you do when, on a road trip, you find yourself hungry just as you spot a Cracker Barrel? 1) Do you stop and spend your gay greenbacks on a meal at this restaurant? or (2) Do you drive by, wagging your finger at the place and ignoring the growls coming from your stomach? The answer is 2). If you answered 1) then it's off to jail and do not collect $200 dollars when you pass Go!

So next time you pass a Cracker Barrel, roll on by and send the message that hate is not okay, that it's not okay to fire employees "because they are gay."

Also, the next time you pick up any Florida Orange Juice, put it back down. It's the truth that hate-monger Rush Limbaugh has been hired as OJ-spokesperson. Florida OJ, be gone! Just say no to bigotry.

Say no, too, to that new coffee house in your gay neighborhood that is owned and operated by several straight investors who appear to care very little about the clientele in their neighborhood. Why spend your money on their coffee and muffins when you can go down the block to a coffee house that's proudly gay-owned and operated?

The same goes for that health club you are thinking about joining. Check it out before you commit your cash. Does it solicit gay and lesbian business? Does it openly support the gay and lesbian community? If not, then maybe it's not good enough for your greenbacks.

And, the next time you dash into a mainstream drug store and pick up a greeting card because it's easier than going to a gay-owned business, just think about what you are doing. Even though finding a gay-owned card store in some place like Plano or Rockwall is like finding a dyke in the congregation of the First Baptist Church in downtown Dallas, it's still crucial to just think about it.

2C

Our dollars speak to the heart of the matter: Moolah is Power.

When you pick the mainstream drug store, you might be choosing to support a business that, in its personnel policies, probably does not include "sexual orientation" as a protected class of people entitled to the same equal rights afforded all other peoples (emphasis mine). So when you're spending your money and there's no "gay-owned" in sight, be sure to be savvy to the politics of your favorite consumer hangout.

A good example of progressive corporate sensibilities includes Apple Computer, which has taken the plunge and survived the test. In fact, the Apple is so convinced that same sex spouses are entitled to the same health care and other worker benefits, as are heterosexual spouses, that it stood up to the challenge of Williamson County's homophobic Commissioners Court. That court finally realized that if its county wanted the bennies of Apple's tax revenues, then it would have to accept Apple's equal and

Meantime, while we're writing checks for that new Apple Powerbook or any myriad of items from our favorite progressive corporations let's not forget about the banks, those institutions that manipulate and spend our moolah in exchange for us having a safe place to keep our cash. These banks need us and all of our crumpled dollar bills, our big, fat paychecks and our skinny, spent paychecks, too. It's a bit of reality in this monopoly-game world of ours, that they need our money to make their money.

But banks must not really want gay and lesbian $. If they did they would advertise in our local publications and directories. They could actively solicit our business, but they don't. And they have so many excuses, some of which include the following: a shortfall of ad bucks, pending mergers, personnel changes, and wanting to keep their advertising dollars "in the community," (read theirs, not ours).

What you just read is an actual accounting. The working title being, "Dyke Does Dallas In Her Efforts to Secure Advertising for the Lambda Pages." These excuses I have recounted came from the mouths of banking executives who are paid to run advertising and public relations campaigns for these banks.

All I can figure is that they apparently don't want our money.

Meanwhile, there are banks out there that are progressive. Bank of America is a good example. It withdrew its contribution to the United Way when a major benefactor, the Boy Scouts, refused to acknowledge the existence of "homosexual" scouts. A few cheers to Bank of America for that gesture, but it's not enough. Their current ad campaign features Hispanics, African Americans and women, but does not include a same-sex couple. It's time that changed. If you have an account with Bank of America, call up and promise to send business their way when the ad campaign is inclusive. Otherwise, call Bank of America, ask for the advertising and marketing department, and tell them you will change your bank in a flash when they include us in their marketing campaign. Do it pronto.

In the interim, consider transferring the moolah from your bank to a financial institution managed by gay and lesbian people. There's even one in Dallas.

And now we continue bringing the issue even closer to home: supporting each other in what could be a very powerful movement. The notion of getting more bang for our buck. This is the issue of gay and lesbian consumers supporting "out" gay and lesbian businesses, whether it's a plumber to fix a leaky sink, an attorney to help with a domestic partnership agreement, or someone to clean your carpet. It is crucial to our future that we do business with people who are like us and proud of it.

As consumers, gay and lesbian people must be savvy to how important it is that gay and lesbian businesses succeed. We must proceed to grow our economy. Lesbian and gay people will not be taken seriously until we have financial clout. Simply put, our lives, well-being, and civil rights depend on our shopping habits.

INSTANT FAMILY

by Maida D. Brooks

The notion that I would have children has danced in my head for so long I can't remember when I first felt the rhythm. All I know is I have yearned for them a long, long time. The fact that I'm a card-carrying lesbian never seemed to make any difference either. So, rocking to the rhythm, I did the whole "I'm going to have a baby" thing. I talked to my therapist to get a ready-for-nursery-time stamp of approval (nobody is ever really ready), read lots of books on pregnancy and parenting, talked a friend into being my sperm donor, took my temperature every morning, and even prepared a nursery for the baby's arrival. Sadly, though, a baby never came from my efforts. I eventually concluded that when the Universe has something in mind for you, like a freight train at 80 miles an hour, don't get in the way.

Then, before I could say "cloth diapers are better for the environment," I fell madly in love with a woman who has three kids, and we were talking about moving in together. Now mind you, I had been preparing for parenthood for years, but step-parenthood had never entered the realm of possibilities for me.

I had no idea what I was in for. I pulled my simultaneously. Into my life waddled, huffled, and paraded (in that order) a two year old wrecking company, a ten year old Nintendo freak, and a fourteen year old future Miss Texas.

A year and a half later I'm still fuzzy from a recurring dream in which I find myself in a t up or, stumbling my way to the kitchen for breakfast. I tumble onto the disorganized pile of "Just add water and stir" packets, and without reading which one I had selected, ripped open the envelope in anticipation of smooth, cool, chocolate nourishment, and then in a panic, suddenly realize the packet whose contents I had just so willingly gulped down said "Instant Family."

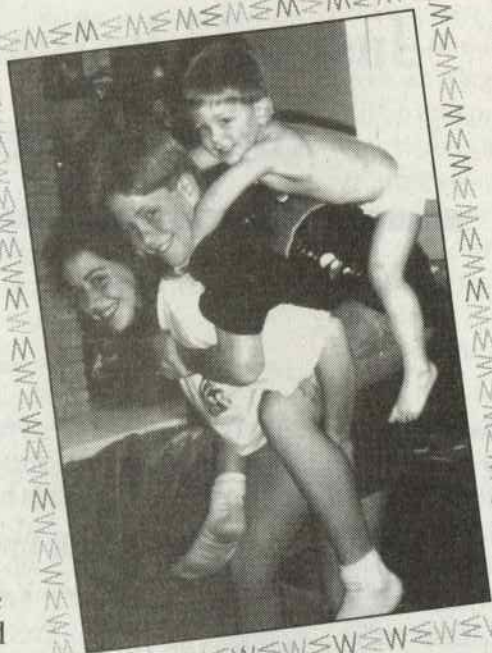

Kids can be overwhelming at times. The nursery I prepared for a newborn is now warmed by the laughter and chilled with the blood-curdling screams of an impetuous preschooler. The medical bills from a recent broken leg and two rounds of surgery on the Nintendo freak are staggering. The extra teen phone line gets more use from the future Miss Texas than the phone company ever bargained for, and we are about to have a third licensed driver in the house with the accompanying insurance bill.

As if all the regular concerns aren't enough, add lesbian mother(s) to the conglomeration. While the kids know "it" and don't seem to mind who we are in the privacy of our home, they are petrified their friends might find out. There have been too many occasions during which my existence and significant role were hatefully dismissed, or even worse, completely ignored because of the fear of some other kid's disapproval. I try not to think about how many times the demonic Mr. Peer Pressure dabbles and jabs at our family unit.

It's not just the kids who suffer at the hands of this adolescent driving force, Mr. Pressure. We all do, because he is fraught with misinformation and stereotypes and fears of the unknown. It is painful to hear reports from one of the kids that a friend questions why this other unrelated person (me), who already (weirdly enough) lives in their house, is consulted about their business and questions their activities. It's even more painful to know that my kid was evasive to those probing and judgmental questions in a desperate attempt to thwart the conversation. Adolescent social stigmas are much more emotionally charged than general adult intolerance and queer moms (or dads) just aren't a cool thing when you're in high school, no matter how much love and attention the kids get in the privacy of their home.

Their mother and I are openly affectionate with each other at home. We talk with them about the five of us as a family. We have explained to the kids that we included each other and them in our wills. We told them this is a big step, something that is not done on a whim, and that it is just one expression of our love and commitment for one another and for them. We don't tolerate name-calling and racial or homophobic comments from them, but feel we can't discipline their friends. So we regularly feel the constant push-pull from Mr. Peer Pressure. He is the unwanted visitor who won't leave, and it's extremely frustrating. Sometimes when he rears his ugly mug and offensive disposition, I think of how far we still have to go for all of us to simply be civil to each other.

I'm glad I had no idea what I was in for with this parenting thing. I might have chickened out and missed the adventure, especially with the added spice of the lesbian element. The kids I now share my life with have been the source of some of my greatest joys and some of my deepest heartaches. I'm glad I have daily opportunities to influence how three human beings look at the world, and at gay and lesbian people. I hope every day that I will be at my best when they need me, that they will feel my love for them in everything I do and that they will understand completely that moms and dads come in all flavors, including gay and lesbian. My next project is to look for other gay and lesbian parents who have children in school with our kids. I think then that they won't feel so all alone, as if they are the only ones in the world who have two moms or two dads.

Yes, maybe the Universe knew not only how much fun I could have parenting, and the incredible lessons I might learn, but also the elements of myself, including my lesbianism, that I could offer to these kids as we try to slay the dragon of hate and bigotry that feed Mr. Peer Pressure's aggressive appetite. After all, we have three more chances at it!

High Hopes For the Year 2000

Hillary Rodham Clinton is sworn in as President. Five U.S. Senators hold a joint press conference and "come out" to America. The governor of New Mexico declares June 28, the anniversary of the Stonewall Uprising, an annual state holiday.

Marilyn Quayle is revealed to be a drag queen. Her husband, Dan, denies any knowledge of the situation and says he is not gay.

High Hopes For the Year 2000

Jody Foster has finally decided its okay to come out. Rupaul is history. And Oprah has a show spotlighting three women she's had lover relationships with.

America's grand old flag and Betsy Ross' claim to fame is voted down by a narrow margin in Congress in favor of the rainbow flag; and the "Star Spangled Banner" is replaced by "Over the Rainbow" as our national anthem.

Gays and lesbians are not only accepted into the military, but are aggressively recruited for their extraordinary talents and skills. Uniforms are redesigned and refitted and fresh cut flowers are living quarter staples.

READ THIS FOR A MOVING EXPERIENCE

... With An Extraordinarily Happy Ending

Moving day. Jeff and Rick finished their coffee as the Curtis truck arrived promptly on time. They were impressed with the thoroughness of the movers as they immediately began to inventory the furniture and collectibles they had spent a lifetime amassing.

As the day progressed, any apprehensions Jeff and Rick had quickly vanished as they watched the movers' attention to detail in preparing each piece for the move. The furnishings were all carefully wrapped in blankets. The mirrors and paintings were given special treatment. And they especially appreciated the delicacy with which they packed the Steuben pieces and their prized antique chandelier.

Their only regret was that the new house wasn't finished. But until it was, they knew their things would be protected in Curtis' temperature and humidity controlled storage. After all, their designer trusted Curtis and had already sent their new acquisitions there. And seeing the movers' performance today reassured them that the delivery, assembly and installation of each piece into their new home would go equally as well.

A month later, they were right. Rick and Jeff had an extraordinary moving experience with Curtis -- a company that has worked with North Texas designers, decorators, galleries, collectors and home owners since 1979, and earned their respect as specialists in the moving and storage of fine arts, antiques and home furnishings.

High Hopes For the Year 2000

—Judy Garland will still be an icon. And show tunes will still be show tunes.

—Public school textbooks include gay and lesbian history.

—Saturday Night Live's "Pat" has been out for several years. "Out" as what, is anyone's guess.
