Are you thinking through the buzz?

MARK KING / DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION AT AID ATLANTA

Circuit life is built around partying. Buzzing through your favorite dance hit, surrounded by friends and flesh, is a seductive experience. It's just plain hot. And these days there seems to be a chemical that's just right for any plans your weekend might include.

AID Atlanta isn't here to stop the party. It's not our mission. But more men are testing HIV positive in our clinic, and they often report that they probably got infected during "that weekend" that they don't remember. Or maybe they do remember, and it was a hot, two day buffet of crystal, X, K and S-E-X. And it all was so perfect and euphoric and sexy... until they got their test results. Isn't there a way to have it all? Wouldn't it be great to make choices without risk or guilt?

AID Atlanta's new project, P.A.R.T.Y. (Partying, AIDS, Risk, Treatment & You) tries to help us understand the link between partying and getting HIV. The program also details how to be safer, including the danger of mixing drugs with each other (or with HIV medications) as well as possible HIV risks.

It isn't true that substance use automatically leads to HIV infection. The drugs themselves are not the reason men get infected; they get infected because of the choices they make, not the drugs they take. Plenty of men manage to party all night, have a great time, and then go home and crash with their lover... or leave with friends and go home to have safer sex.

It is possible to both party and act responsibly. Doing drugs does not release us from an obligation to protect ourselves and others. It can be done.

The biggest practical problem with substance use is remembering to use a condom and using it properly. Face it, when you're high it's hard to keep a woody long enough to slip one on. You have that problem? Talk to your doctor. Chances are your doc would rather prescribe Viagra, so that you can use a condom effectively, than have to prescribe thirty pills a day because you got infected.

AID Atlanta has produced a brochure about party drugs, their effects, the dangers of mixing them, and which ones are most dangerous if you are on HIV medications. You can get a free copy by contacting Gay Outreach at 404.872.0600, ext 278, or e-mail dowella@aidatlanta.org. While you're at it, ask about Slipping & Sliding, a sexy six-week program that bring a dozen men together to talk about sex, drugs, men and intimacy.

Cardiovascular Exercises

which is the best?

First, let's get the easy answer out of the way. The best cardiovascular exercise for YOU is the one that YOU perform correctly and regularly. Some examples of cardiovascular exercises could be:

fast walking	recumbent bike
mall walking	stationary bike
jogging	spinning classes
roller blading	combination
outdoor biking	cross-training machines
aerobic classes	swimming
treadmill	numerous new
stairclimber	work-out classes

TARGET HEART RATE is a critical part of cardiovascular conditioning. You can't just step up to the treadmill and do your 25 minutes. This is critical to burn-

Now if you really want to get fit, and get fit fast, lets look at the best cardio exercises and then you determine what works for you.

A cardiovascular exercise is an exercise that is systemic while weightlifting is a local exercise. This means it involves more than just a particular group of muscles like the biceps. For example, a good cardiovascular exercise involves the muscles in the thighs and buttocks as well as the lungs, liver, heart and bones. Remember the heart is a muscle, the most important muscle you have (even more important than that one) and it must be worked regularly or it will deteriorate. By exercising the heart you can make it pump stronger and slower (pulse) making it last longer. It is just about that simple.

I often refer to weightlifting as the exercises that make you pretty but cardiovascular exercises are what keep you alive. Actually it is the combination of the two unless you still have good genes working for you.

ing fat off fast. First determine your maximum heart rate. The formula used by some trainers is 220 minus your age ($220 - \text{age} = \text{MHR}$). This formula works well for only about 30 - 40 percent of the people but it is the only way to determine it without paying for a more expensive medically supervised test. Another way is to jog or use a cardio machine to exhaustion and take your pulse. Your target heart rate should be 70 - 85 % of that figure. Let's say your maximum heart rate is

160. Then $160 \times 80\% = 128$. So you want to perform an exercise that keeps your pulse around 128.

Your target heart rate is the "zone" you might have heard about for efficient fat burning and cardiovascular endurance training. If you are not fit yet try at 70% of your max. heart rate. If you do aerobic classes or you feel in good shape stay around 85 %.

HOW LONG you do a cardiovascular exercise is determined by what type it is. For example a more moderate one like cross country skiing (which numerous machines try to duplicate) might only take 12-15 minutes for a good workout. But the stairclimber or recumbent bike which is too difficult for out of condition individuals might take 20-25 minutes. Remember you want to perform the exercise, get into your zone or THR, but not be gasping for air. Otherwise you are just burning sugar which is your emergency energy supply.

An easy way to illustrate the zone is that you burn up about the same amount of calories running one mile vs. fast walking one mile. And the person that was fast walking probably could go a second mile too. So when you get on the life-cycle tomorrow or the treadmill put it at a level that keeps you in your zone. Going at level 5 for 10 minutes warms your body up, lubricates the joints and increases your pulse but it is not an aerobic workout. Try level 2 or 3 for 25 minutes and burn some fat while your at it. Next time you roller blade, jog, swim, etc. keep this zone in mind. Slow down or speed up as needed.

HOW OFTEN is important too. Once a week will not cut it. You must do your cardio 3 - 4 times per week. Otherwise you are stressing your heart each time and not really reaping the benefits. But remember one day can be a fast walk through Piedmont, the next time a walk around the block, the next time the treadmill and so on. It doesn't mean going to the gym each time and getting on the machines.

CROSS-TRAINING is a great idea. This just means performing your exercises in a different way. If you are a gym rat don't climb up on the stairclimber each time for cardio. Use different machines or do 10 minutes on one cardio machine, 10 minutes on another and 5 or 10 on another. Your body can adapt to the same machine 2 - 3 times a week. Have you ever seen an overweight person who is regularly in your aerobic class? I've seen instructors who either need to lay off the special sauce at Mickey D's or start teaching different types of classes because their bodies have adapted to their exercise regimen.

Here are a few other suggestions to get a little extra out of your cardio time:

Stairmaster- try changing your toe placement every five minutes to work the legs and butt differently (toes in, toes straight ahead, toes outward). Also place your hands on your hips to avoid leaning on the machine. This will help you to get a better butt workout.

Recumbent bike- this is the best machine for rounding out the butt and getting a good pump to the quadriceps of the upper legs. Change the placement of your foot every five minutes by pushing with your toe pad then your arch area and then your heel pad area.

Treadmill- placing your running surface on a 10% incline (most machines will do this) will help you to achieve burning 30% more calories while doing this exercise.

Magazines, books, or music- if you have trouble going the length of time you should these will really help you to get there by getting your mind off the exercise.

Again, the best cardiovascular exercise is the one you will do regularly. If you don't enjoy it or you dread doing it each time you will eventually find an excuse not to do it. So cross-train to keep from getting bored, stay in your zone and you will enjoy a longer life.

dj craig spy spins atlanta into a frenzy

Spring is around the corner, gyms are packed with enough eye candy to give Willie Wonka a wet dream. The boys are burning a Spring fever temperature in anticipation of Atlanta's long party-filled weekends that have placed our city on the "A" list of circuit music stardom.

A select few deejays have put Atlanta on the cutting edge by playing some of the biggest beats, crowds and gay events in the country. A leading force for this renaissance is DJ Craig Spy. His style is best described as a fusion of imaginative deep base-line beats and razor-edge vocals with a building driving energy. The tunes he spins bring on a throw-your-hands-in-the-air euphoric atmosphere.

When spinning at circuit parties he pulls in crowds by the hundreds and even thousands. The nationally acclaimed DJ has turned music and crowds spanning the country from L.A. to last year's Pensacola Memorial Day Sunday party which drew unprecedented hordes of men to the weekend's hottest event ever. In Atlanta, he spins crowds into a frenzy at the Warehouse, Fusion, Blakes and sometimes the Armory.

His emerging popularity stems from his exhilarating energetic tunes that flirt with your desires, but leave your feet wanting more after the party's over. He buys fresh vinyl regularly in NY and has shopped LA, Miami, London, Amsterdam and Paris. All this to stay ahead of what makes Atlanta tick.

"Atlanta is a different music scene than say NY, Miami or LA," said Craig. "The NY and Miami scenes for example like musty, darker, pots n' pans, tribal beats while Atlanta leans toward happy, poignant vocals, base-line filled, percussion rhythms," he added.

His last CD called Muscles was E.D.'s chart-topping disc for weeks in December. It bumped Cher's "Believe" off the number one spot and sent her singing the national anthem at this year's Superbowl. The disc transcends listeners into an evolution of energy with hits like "Nobody's Supposed to Be Here" by Deborah Cox among others. Each song keeps building on the next, hit by hit until you're finally thinking "Don't Let This Moment End" which is another featured hit by Gloria Estefan in the music compilation. Still today, the staff at E.D.'s can't keep the CD in stock and told Atlanta's DJ, "you don't know what you've started."

Craig's deejay career began a long time ago in Long Beach California back in 1986 at Ripples. He originally auditioned for the Monday and Tuesday night slot, but a week later was their head DJ drawing their Friday, Saturday and Sunday T-dance crowds. Later, he moved to L.A.'s premier club Studio One at the time, now called Axis and then commuted to San Diego to wind up club WCPC on Saturday nights. His night spinning stints produce an aerial uplifting experience that, believe it or not, parallels his career as an aerospace engineer at Lockheed Martin. That is what brought him to Atlanta after being at McDonnell Douglas for 6 years in Long Beach California.

Craig got his inspiration from DJs, remixers and producer superstars Jr. Vasquez and DJ Craig Spy's new CD titled Renaissance is the latest music masterpiece to hit the circuit scene. Absolutely brilliant, breathtaking and premieres this week at E.D.'s. "I've Had Enough" by Regina Belle and "Flower Duet '99" by Jonathan Peters are some of the high energy mixes featured on the CD. Renaissance will "Take You To the Top" and make you "Weep" when it's over.

Victor Calderone, but recently he admires Hex Hector for sticking with vocals rather than going the dark progression route that music is taking today. Even more important says Craig, "I get my inspiration from the many strong supporters that follow and promote my work."

Atlanta native, Adrian Reeves, has lived in several cities throughout the southeast, but always seems to make it back home to Atlanta where he feels most comfortable.

Adrian enjoys reading fiction novels; his favorite authors include E. Lynn Harris, Terri Macmillan and Sandra Kitt. Adrian also enjoys meeting new people, hanging out with friends, working out and rollerblading.

Rocky's Barwnorescope

AQUARIUS /January 21-February 18

Read for Capricorn since you might be in a similar situation. In fact, with so much energy emanating from the planets in Aquarius and your Uranus ruler, you probably should read the entire column to see how and with whom you'll connect. The annual Leo full moon highlights partnerships, but with a blue moon and lunar eclipse this weekend, there's bound to be unexpected twists and turns in your close relationships. Don't take any of it too seriously. Come Monday, you could be absolutely brilliant and make a stunning breakthrough all on your own.

PISCES /February 19-March 19

Chances are that magnetic Venus in your sign will attract a sexy Scorpio or frisky Aries for the big weekend festivities. You can have such a fabulous time on Friday, that you may be convinced that your fondest dream is about to come true. Stop fooling yourself; your imaginative Neptune ruler is being prodded along by horny Mars, and down that path lies deception and disappointment. Meanwhile a group of friends might invite you to come play in their ball park and while you're there, to change the rules of the game.

ARIES /March 20-April 19

I don't have to tell you how wonderful you can feel when Venus deigns to bestow loving sentiments and artistic sensibilities on you and your lusty Mars ruler. Such is the case this weekend, so take full advantage of every sweet smile, seductive glance and heartfelt sigh. By the time Mars squares illusion-filled Neptune, you might be convinced that you're living a dream life. As long as you remember that dreams end suddenly (and strangely) you'll have a great time. Take your creative effort up a level; success, is just around the corner.

TAURUS /April 20-May 20

Yes, you fall in love too easily; yes, you fall too fast. But how can anyone ignore the sugar and heat created when your Venus ruler favorably aligns with passionate Mars. And since Mars visits your Scorpio marriage house only once every two years, no one can say you fall in love too frequently. The fact that Venus, in your midheaven, is pulling in a partner who can energize your career - and please your mother to boot - makes this alliance practically irresistible. (Depending on how you feel about Mom.) This is also the time to exercise your communication skills, i.e., to have an alibi on hand, just in case.

GEMINI /May 21-June 20

Twins are zapped six times a year by messages from their higher mind - three while your Mercury ruler is retrograde, three while it is direct. What happens this week can be the realization of an idea you had, the action you took at the beginning of December when the sun and Mercury last met. Only now, because futuristic Uranus is part of the conjunction, you're in a more idiosyncratic, independent frame of mind. However, don't ignore affectionate messages sent from abroad or a classmate's classic come-on. You're not that independent!

CANCER /June 21-July 22

The "something worthwhile to show for your effort" I promised you at the new moon on the 17th should be well in hand by the Leo full moon on Sunday. Because this rare full moon is "blue" and eclipsed, you may be less confident about your accomplishments, however, there is power in an untraditional partnership, and profit, too. All things Aquarian - video, cyberspace and group interaction - serve your best interests, but will you find time to pursue them if you're locked in a loving embrace? Will you care?

26 / david

LEO /July 23-August 22

The tension mounts as the ever-hopeful, persistently cheerful Leo full moon tries to counteract the strangeness of the sun-Mercury-Uranus conjunction in Aquarius. Surprises are to be expected when the moon is blue and eclipsed; however a co-worker or loved one could become borderline bonkers, and you might behave pretty bizarrely yourself. Still and all, the voice in your head this week, the ideas flashing through your mind can result in fascinating alternatives to your normal routine. Welcome new influences, unusual practices and slightly eccentric people.

VIRGO /August 23-September 22

Adjust the antenna, turn up the volume, extend your range; a more eclectic, electronic audience is waiting for your words. As your Mercury ruler merges with the Aquarius sun and inventive Uranus, you can't help but project those qualities of your creativity that are unique. You can also project a wild eroticism that, at first glance, may seem out of character. But we know the essence of Virgo has precious little to do with virginity. While your intuitive mind is transmitting ideas that will soon shape your future, your body is sending a message of its own.

LIBRA /September 23-October 22

True romance, compassion, a hint of self-sacrifice. And while arranging these Venusian elements in different ways can turn into an intriguing game, what'll happen in real life and real time will be more enjoyable, and sexually satisfying, than fooling around with "what if." So, given your druthers, wouldn't you opt for exchanging hugs and passionate kisses in private. Don't worry, the crazies in the family won't need your presence if they want to upset the applecart.

SCORPIO /October 23-November 21

You're cooking on two burners this weekend; firstly, the sun and your Pluto co-ruler validate your amazing ability to rebound from life's harsher moments. A reward for honesty and stamina will be forthcoming, but don't hold your breath. Hold on, instead, to whatever sweetness and light enters your domain while adorable Venus is favoring your Mars co-ruler. Another reward, this time for being in the right place at the right time. But even if you don't find true love, you could be quite happy with beauty, harmony and a steamy seduction scene.

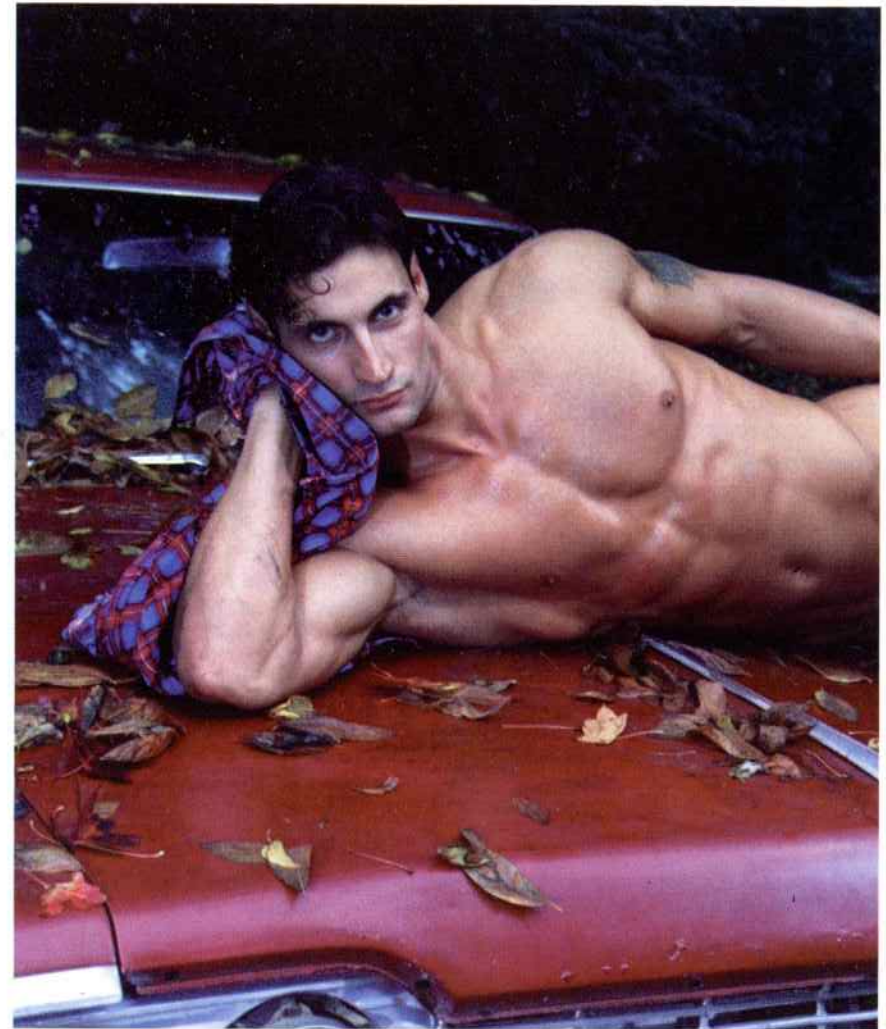

SAGITTARIUS /November 22-December 21

Archers who have been restructuring key elements in their psychological profile, i.e., those in therapy or recovery, can stumble into a payback encounter of the paycheck kind. Maybe only you will appreciate where the money is coming from, but your near and dear will be happy to help you spend it. If you're planning to lay out big bucks for TV, computer or other electronic equipment, do it before the sun and Mercury magnify the erratic Uranian energy early in the work week, also before the Leo-Aquarius blue moon colors your judgment.

CAPRICORN /December 22-January 20

You are in a position to receive both love and lovely items from a go-getter at work or in the community. Perhaps someone who recently was an irritant but who now prefers to placate? How much this will cost depends on how much you value your independence. Take into consideration the Uranian oddities underlying this week's vibe, and chance are that no one, least of all you, can predict how you'll react. One thing is certain - you'll have the courage of your convictions, whatever they happen to be at the moment.

bar review BLAKE'S ON THE PARK THAT 70'S DRAG SHOW

RAY MATHESON

What do you get when you mix hot boys, seventies disco and some of Atlanta's greatest drag divas? Come to Blake's on Sunday nights and find the answer.

Last Sunday, Blake's, everyone's favorite little bar on the park, was the setting for "That Seventies Drag Show," starring some of Atlanta's hottest drag divas. This all star cast included your hostess and M.C., Dina Jacobs, Shawna Brooks, and Sierra Foxx with opening night guests Lauren LaMasters and Tasha Khan. Disco, afros and glamour were on the scene at Blake's on the Park for opening night of "That Seventies Drag Show."

The 70's are back at Blake's On The Park

The whole staff at Blake's got in on the act, dusting off their bellbottoms and pulling their halter-tops out of attic storage. The bar was decorated with peaceful flowers and funky balloons. Bar tenders slung out plenty of free shooters, and patrons shook their groove things to all their favorite hits of the seventies.

In attendance were Gloria Gaynor, Diana Ross, Donna Summer and Deborah Harry ... and many more disco divas (or at least their look alikes). Opening night was such a smashing success that Blake's plans to bring the show back to you each and every Sunday. The party will get bigger and bigger each week with costume contests and free give-aways. It's official, ya'll: Blake's, always known for it's cute boys and great drinks, will go back in time to the seventies every Sunday night.

A WHITE VELVETEEN WINTER PARTY WEEKEND IN SOBE

by douglas buttersworth

Need help getting whisked away on a winter wonderland Winter Party Getaway? David Atlanta Magazine talked with Neal Miller of All Points Travel to get the transportation details short of hiring a dogsled team, and the COOLEST hotels to snuggle up in for Miami's Winter Party Weekend, benefitting Dade Human Rights Foundation. Corny, wintry analogies aside, we got the word on the best hotel and air fares available as of 02/10. One hint: make your reservations NOW the longer you wait, the more you'll pay. This holds doubly true for your air fare. The market rate for Delta and American Airlines is set by AirTran, you'll probably get a good rate all around. However, Delta and American Airlines may require a seven day advance purchase period rather than a three day advanced purchase period with AirTran. Therefore, you'll need to determine which day you will be leaving and which day you'll return. For instance, if you plan to travel on
