The Ocean Walk

In the seven years I have lived in Miami I have been an active, visible member in the community. Since leaving the Crisco Disco I haven't been as active or as visible as usual. This has led to some speculation and some WILD rumors as to my whereabouts, plans, etc. For those of you who have read or heard the crazy stories going around...

First of all, I AM NOT going anywhere. Except for a weekend in Key West, I have continually resided in the same place for the past two years.

In addition, except for a few small, personal bills, I DO NOT OWE MONEY TO ANYONE, and my bills do not total anything close to the rumored $18,000. In fact, I wouldn't be suprised if the person(s) who started the rumors are the same people who owe me, which is probably why they started them.

I want to thank my many friends for all their support - and if you wonder what happened to Frank - he's been busy reorganizing his life.

See you again soon.

REAL ESTATE TIPS

Residential income-producing properties have excellent money-making potential. As in any other kind of business investment, you must be careful and selective when you buy and alert and businesslike when you are operating and managing your investment.

For your use in analyzing the various aspects involved in this type of investment, you should consider using several forms to help make your decisions easier by making the basic information more simply understandable.

I suggest the following forms be available for your inspection: Location of property, physical condition, maintenance, cash flow. Remember "cash flow" is the money you have left after you have collected the rent and all the other income and have paid all operating costs, taxes, and mortgage payments. "taxable profit" is a different thing entirely.
