but it's very tough.

"Some fans are more homophobic than you'd expect. [Farrell] is such an up-and-coming heartthrob, if I was his adviser, I'd tell him to take a pass on this."

The sad thing is, it was probably a gay agent MSNBC was quoting.

According to MSNBC.com, Irish star Farrell is interested in the part but conflicting remarks from his spokeswoman have confused matters.

When asked by reporters if Farrell would be comfortable playing a gay role she said yes, then she changed her mind saying she didn't know — before finally hanging up.

The more things change, the more they remain the same, huh?

Thankfully, not all big-screen sex studs are so skittish. Ben Affleck has agreed to appear in a new ad campaign to talk about homosexuality.

No, silly, he's not talking about his homosexuality. Not yet at least. The Oscar-winner — who is dating sexy singer Jennifer Lopez — will star alongside his gay male cousin as part of a campaign for Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays (PFLAG), after his aunt persuaded him to appear.

The pair are currently shooting the commercial, which is expected to air later this year.

Singer Cyndi Lauper will also appear in the campaign after filming an ad with her lesbian sister.

Retired chat show host Rosie O'Donnell could face legal action over her decision to walk away from her namesake magazine after leaving publishers baffled as to why she has dumped them.

O'Donnell plans to remove all her links to the magazine in December and announced this at a hastily arranged press conference a couple of weeks ago — just hours after telling publishers at Gruner & Jahr of her plans.

O'Donnell says, "During the past two months they have moved to take away the editorial control I had under our agreement."

But the publishers are adamant they've done nothing wrong.

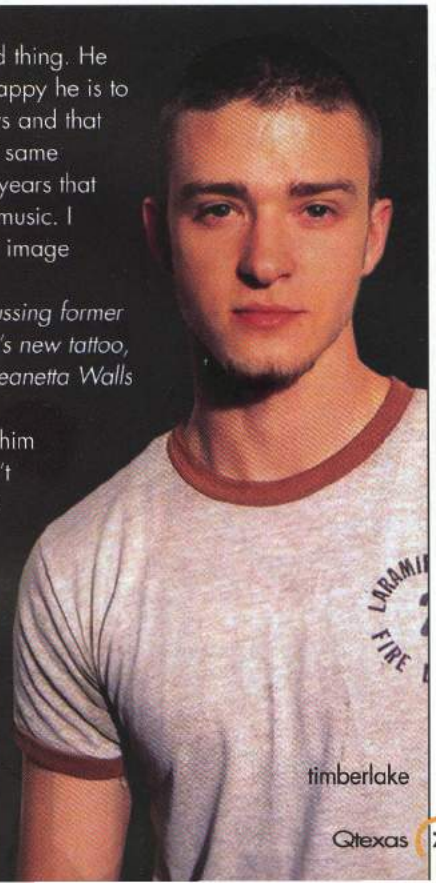

In a statement, they explain, "It is unfathomable to us that she would abandon the entire staff

"It's a massive, Asia-inspired thing. He was going on about how happy he is to be out of the Backstreet Boys and that he was so sick of doing the same thing over and over for 10 years that he was ready to get out of music. I think the tattoo is part of an image change for him."

— An associate discussing former Backstreet Boy Nick Carter's new tattoo, to MSNBC's Jeanetta Walls

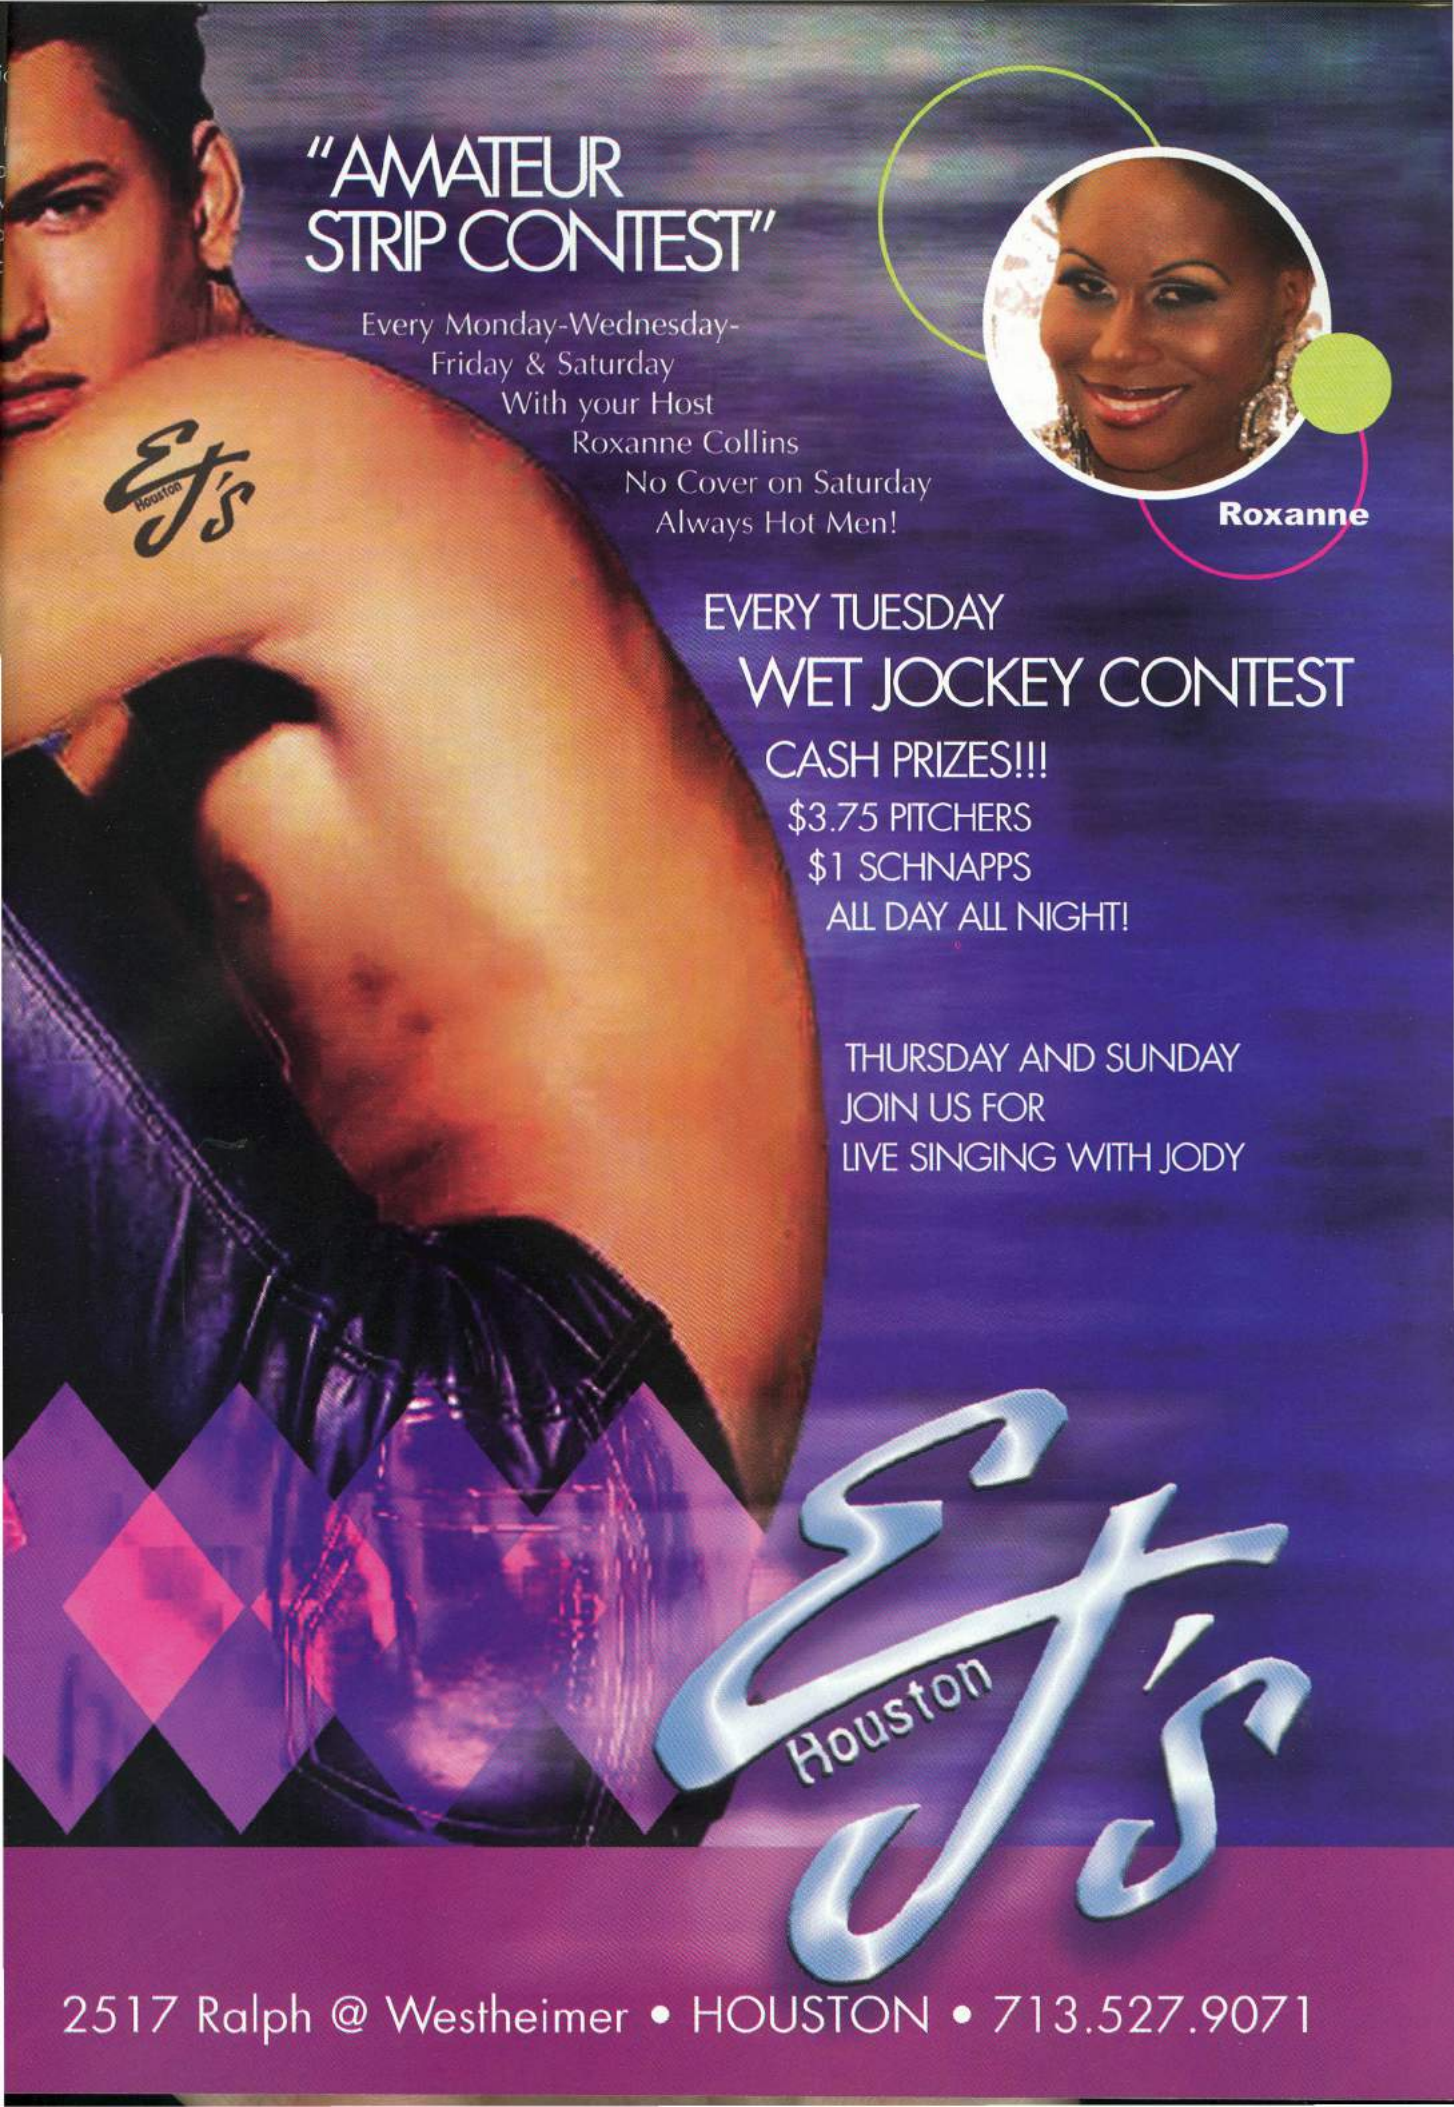

"Nobody wants to wait on him because he thinks he doesn't have to pay or tip. I always get his credit card first."

Libra (September 23-October 22) Although the week starts out in a rather uneventful manner, Monday's Full Moon in your sign will sure perk up energy levels. Just expect everything and anything to happen and you'll be just fine. Avoid the social scene Saturday night. Wait for Sunday brunch to blow off some much needed steam.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) It would help quite a bit if you'd think of life in more shades of gray, instead of stark black and white. There's more room for flexibility and compromise. A respected elder has some valuable information to share. Listen with open ears and an open mind. Tuesday could feel like an obstacle course.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) You've rarely looked better in your life, Sag. So why the heck aren't you out on the town attracting eligible, hot guys? Get your butt out of the house or we'll sic Leo on your case. Finances look very strong and are likely to continue that way. That new roommate is working out just fine.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) Career and financial aspects look absolutely astounding — now how about going out on an actual date? Your social skills are a bit rusty (ask a Libra for help). Those annoying headaches are likely from spending too much time staring at the PC screen. There's more to life than work.

Aquarius (January 20-February 18) Continue to march to that unique and individual drummer who dwells inside of you, no matter what others might think. You were not put on this earth to follow the flock. Taking the path less traveled is in your DNA. That being said, don't push the envelope of eccentricity too much at once.

Pisces (February 19-March 19) This week's Full Moon is likely to increase the general pace and tempo all around. It's not the most comfortable fit for you, but it does get things done in a very direct manner. The answer to a perplexing question won't be found in any book. You should begin to nose around and seek an answer.

Aries (March 20-April 19) All of that hard work over the last few months is finally beginning to pay off, Aries. It's nice to see that you're at least attempting to be more patient, though Lord knows you'll never win a medal. A weekend getaway would put some bounce back into your step. Call up a special friend and get something going.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The two biggest keys to success this week involve keeping an open mind and listening more than speaking. It just takes a bit more willpower. Even the stubborn bull can be flexible and fair-minded. Make some changes with your diet. One of the major food groups is lacking, and we don't mean Taco Bell.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) Financial relief is on the way, but not quite at your door just yet. Continue to brown-bag it a while longer and cut costs wherever possible. It's not the best time to be listing properties for sale — wait until next month. Don't take well-meaning advice from a friend personally. It's not worth the trouble.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) With Cappy glues to the PC and you spending so much time landscaping (it does look lovely), it's no wonder neither of you have much of a social life. You can't go steady with a chrysanthemum, either. Get cleaned up and leave the house/yard for a spell. When was the last time you had a gourmet meal?

Leo (July 23-August 22) Many of you lions/lionesses have been feeling especially edgy lately. That's because you're overdue for a vacation. Call a travel agent and book something special ASAP. You also need to roar once in a while. This will let off a great deal of frustration. Just be careful who happens to be in the vicinity.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) This appears to be a fairly well balanced week, offering no real surprises. Spend most of the weekend close to home to help recharge those batteries. You'll be fully back in gear by Monday morning. A Full Moon on the 6th is likely to disturb sleep patterns.
