Bisexual musician Skott Freedman draws on life experiences to educate and entertain feature

by scott huffman

freedman

Scott Huffman is a Dallas freelance writer. Email him at shuffman@connect.net.

Skott Freedman's musical style defies neat, conventional labels, and the 23-year-old musician takes significant pride in the fact that critics and reviewers are often stymied by his captivating and unique blend of pop, jazz, and folk music.

"I enjoy being different," Freedman admits enthusiastically. "I am happy knowing I may not fit in as people might expect me to. [My music] has a lot of influences — pop, jazz, classical and blues. But rather than saying I'm a blues pianist or a pop pianist, I just say that I'm a singer-songwriter and my music may stretch across different pockets."

Freedman describes Some Company, his acclaimed fourth CD, as a "duet between the piano and voice." The intimate and personal feel of Some Company sharply contrasts with the full-band sound of his previous release, Anything Worth Mentioning, an album that earned the openly bisexual musician Outmusic's 2002 award for outstanding new recording by a male artist.

Freedman's love for writing music began at the tender age of 10 and remains a passion which he continues to develop and explore.

"I always knew that music is what I wanted to do," he says. "As a teenager, I was horribly depressed, isolated and suicidal. But the one thing that was always comforting to me was music — hearing someone sing about things that I was feeling."

Now the tables have turned, and Freedman's songs brighten the spirits of others. "I love it any time someone takes an interest in my music," he says. "I would never take that for granted. I'm just so honored that people are listening to me."

Freedman caught his first professional break at the age of 16 after performing during open mic night at a New Jersey coffeehouse. "The guy came up to me afterwards and asked if I could do [a two-hour show] the next week" Freedman recalls. "I said 'Sure!' but I actually wound up just repeating songs during the second set because I only had like 10 songs when I went in." Since then, Freedman's popularity and musical repertoire have increased exponentially.

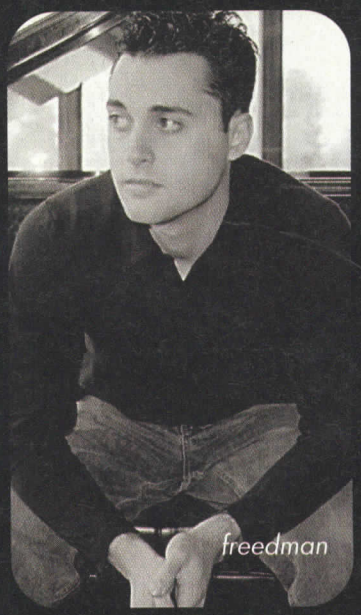

The Ithaca College alum, who graduated with a degree in speech pathology, suffers no regret over choosing a risky yet personally rewarding musical career over graduate study. "I can always come back to grad school," he reasons, "but you cannot just come back to a career in music. You cannot take for granted that in 10 years people will still care."

Freedman finds that his fan base is divided between college students and members of the gay community. "During the summer months, I do a lot of pride and outdoor festivals," Freedman explains. "And the rest of the year, I do bars, coffeehouses and colleges — so I've had both communities latch on, which is sort of unique and great for me."

Freedman is quick to point out, however, that his open bisexuality is a double-edged sword that has both hindered and helped his career. "One paper recently called my bisexuality a neat marketing gimmick," Freedman says. "But by being very out in general, and by saying that I am different from the norm, I am positioning myself to lose support from major [recording] labels. On the other hand, because I'm out, I've gotten great reaction from the LGBT community."

Although he has yet to tour in Texas, Freedman penned a song called "Dallas-Fort Worth Airport" about an overnight experience there — an experience that he considers a part of paying his dues as a struggling musician.

"Last summer I got stranded in Dallas because of a thunderstorm, and I had to stay at the airport," Freedman recalls. "I didn't have money to go to a hotel and I didn't know anyone to call, so I wound up sleeping there. I told a security guard about my situation, and he got a cot for me to sleep on. So there I am at 3 a.m. with people cleaning and vacuuming, and I'm on this bloody, dirty cot," he laughs.

Nearly all of Freedman's lyrics are inspired by everyday life — events audiences can readily identify with. Freedman also finds songwriting a cathartic and renewing experience.

"One of the most personal songs I've written so far is 'Treehouse,'" Freedman says of a song on his latest CD. "It's my own true story about my family, and kind of the functional dysfunctionality that has been part of it — grudges, silences and alcohol abuse — just getting it all out."

Alongside his emerging fame as a musician, Freedman has become a poster boy of sorts for bisexuality, lecturing on the topic at colleges and universities. "I'm a singer first and foremost," he says, "but I am also passionate about certain causes. And speaking about bi-phobia became another of my passions."

Freedman recalls struggling with his sexual identity during college after coming out as a gay man and subsequently developing a crush on a girl. Uncomfortable with the thought of discussing these feelings with his gay friends, Freedman again felt closeted — this time as a bisexual man in the gay community — and remedied the situation by coming out as bisexual.

Freedman borrows from personal experience and the experiences of others in his lecture, designed to dispel myths and shed light on common misconceptions about the bisexual lifestyle. Through candid discussion, Freedman hopes to foster acceptance of bisexuality in both the gay and straight communities.

Freedman says he is currently in a relationship with a guy, and while his boyfriend identifies as gay, he respects the fact that Freedman identifies as bisexual. "He doesn't like that it's a difference between us," Freedman says of his boyfriend, "but he has never questioned it. He has attended a bunch of my lectures, and he is very supportive of it."

As for his musical future, Freedman's plans are simple. "I just want to keep doing what I,m doing," he says. "Success is being a full time artist and paying my rent, and I feel so lucky to be able to do this. I want to do what I love — I want to tour and play for people."

Legendary New York DJ Warren Gluck hits Houston

Gay dance club music had to start somewhere, and you could make an argument that it began with Warran Gluck. At the height of pre-AIDS, East Coast gay liberation movement, Gluck may well have been the most prominent dance DJ around. On Saturday, May 17, Gluck comes to Rich's Houston for an evening of high energy sounds.

He started his career on New York's Long Island in 1975, and within four years was the resident spin master at Fire Island's Monster. From there, he has performed at major clubs throughout gay America, including The Monster in Key West and NYC (where he has been head DJ since its grand opening in 1982), the Pavilion and the Blue Whale in the Pines on Fire Island, and the Big Apple's legendary mega-club, The Saint, where he was a regular throughout the 1980s. He even manages to take his act to the high seas, playing on all-gay cruises for Atlantis.

Gluck's musical style is often described as upbeat and festive, with an accent on big vocals. But there are layers to his dancefloor identity — he has the ability to play a dark, mysterious program when the party's theme calls for it, and prides himself on taking the crowd on a musical journey, encompassing many different genres.

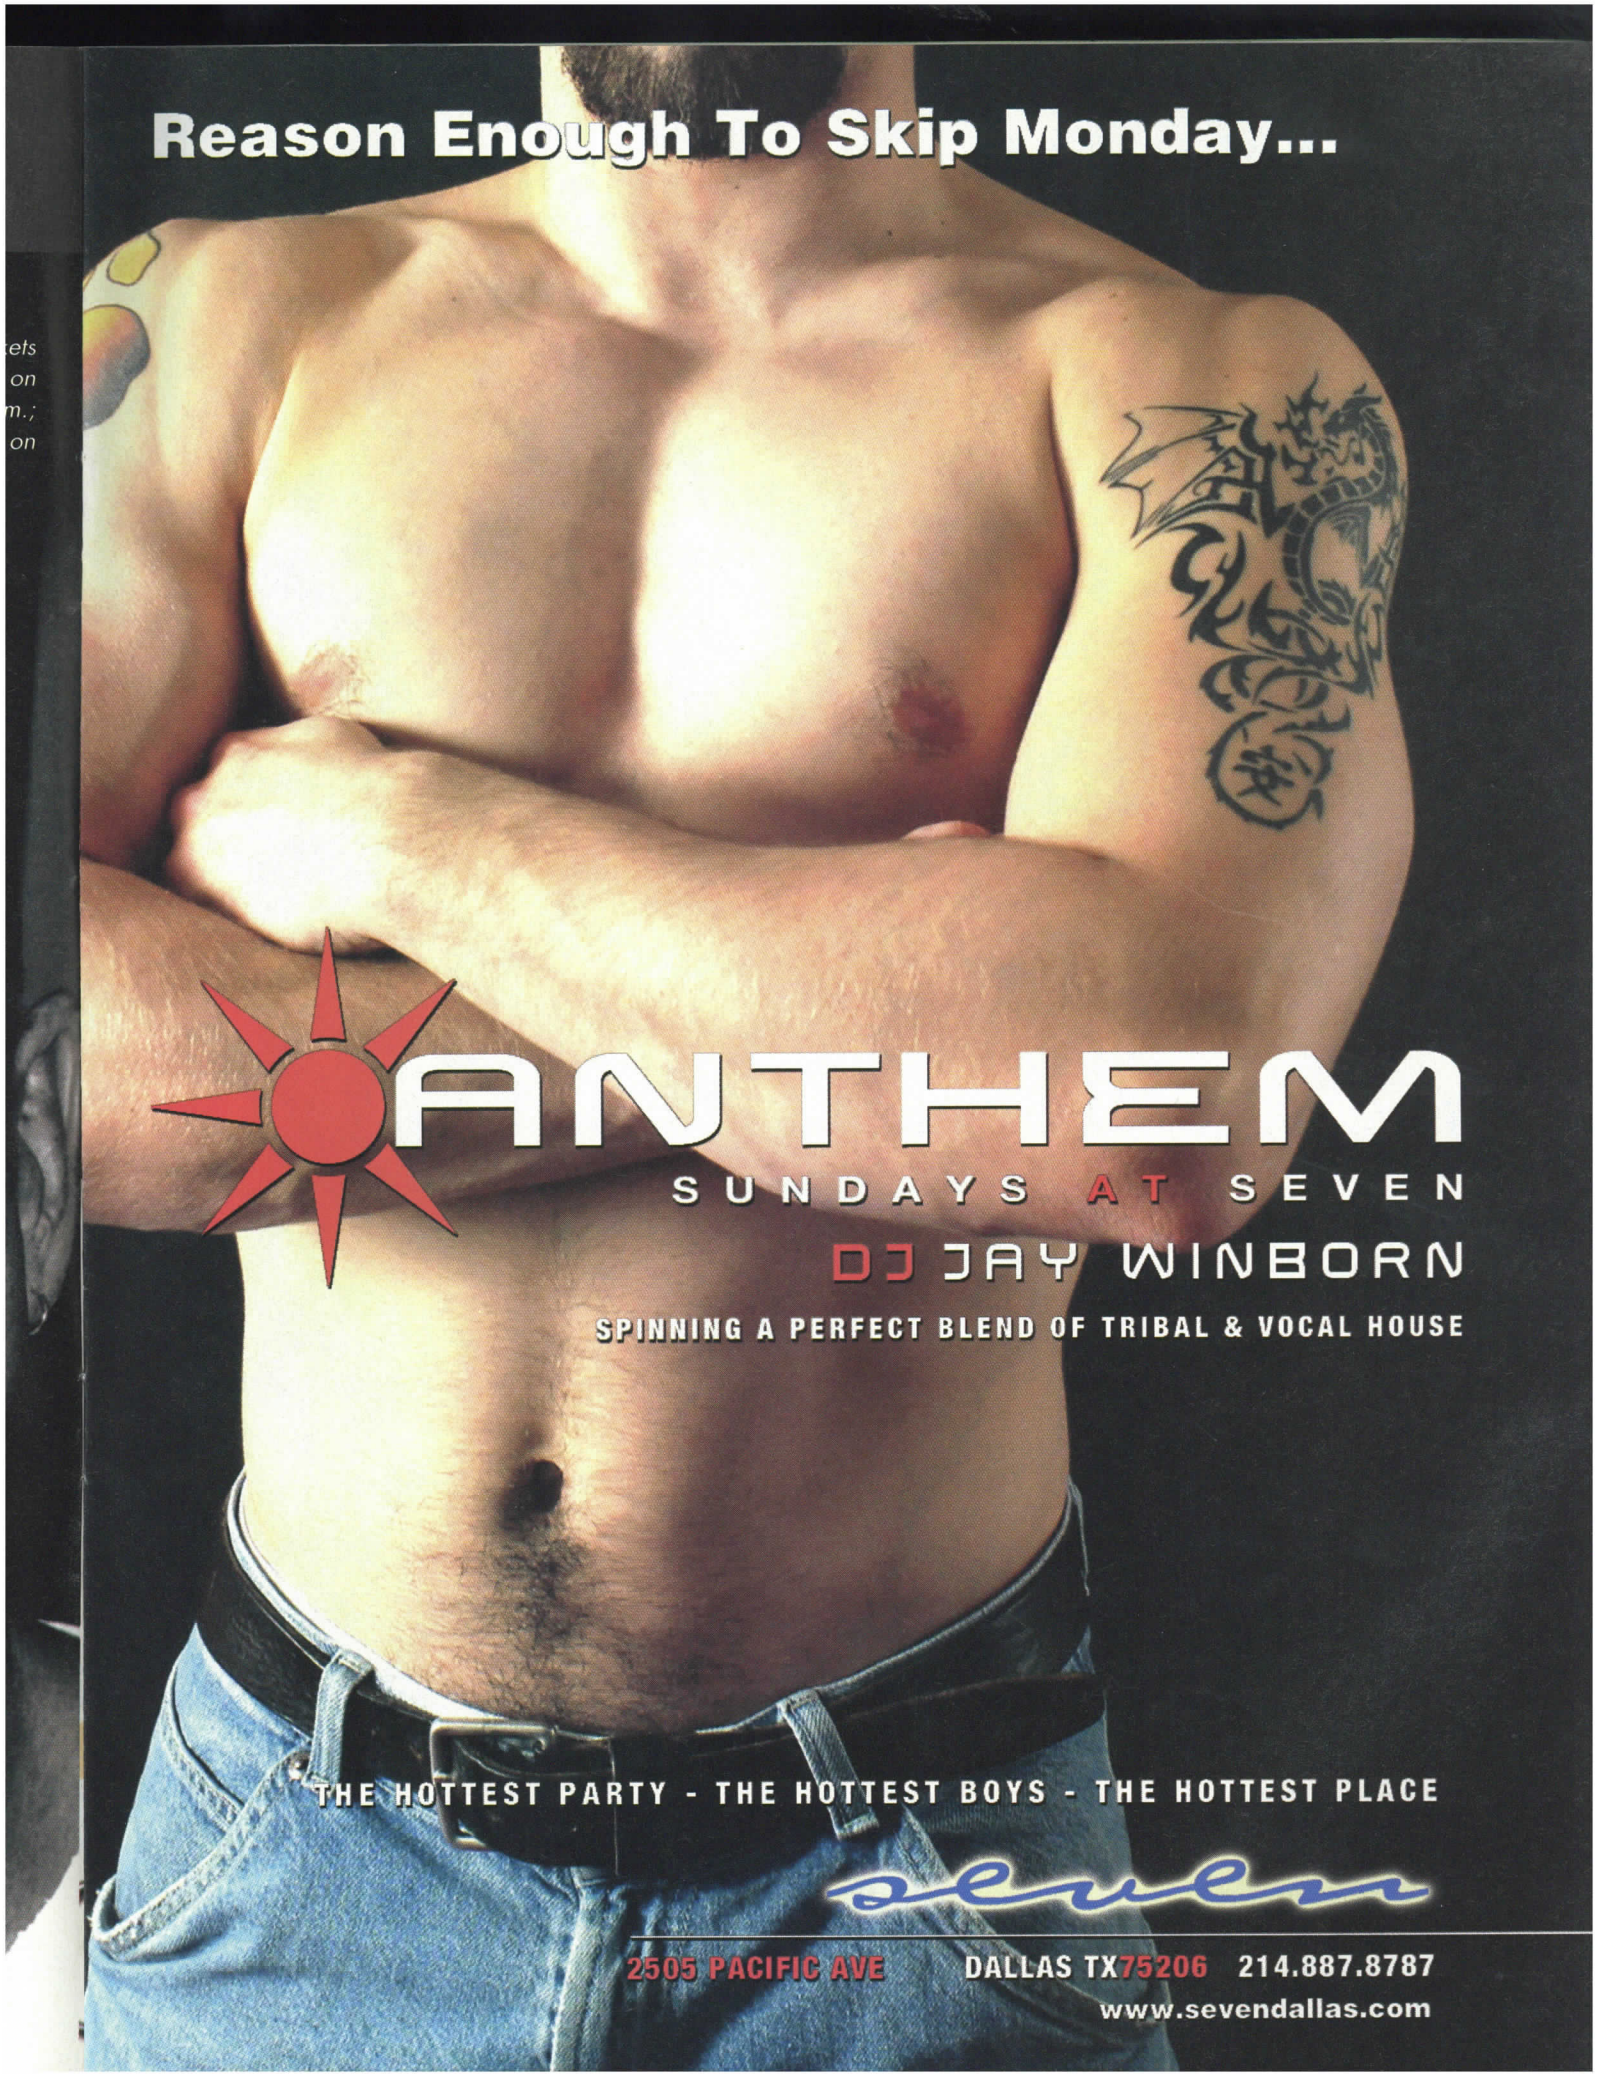

He's certainly had the practice to hone his craft. Through the years, Gluck has performed at just about every major circuit event in the country, in addition to the main dance event for the Millennium March on Washington and three appearance at the world's largest dance party, the Sydney Gay & Lesbian Mardi Gras. In 2002, he was the only American DJ to spin at the Gay Games, offering his set to 6,000 revelers at the Sunset Party on Sydney Harbor. Gluck calls that recent event his favorite gig in his illustrious career. But now he's in Texas. It's our chance to show him how good a party can get.

Doors open at 9 p.m. Tickets $10 in advance and at door on night of show before 11 p.m.; $15 at door after 11 p.m. on night of show.

Hideout Happenings — The Hideout has something going on most nights. On Sundays, you can catch two hot gay TV shows, HBO's Six Feet Under and Showtime's Queer as Folk, starting at 9 p.m. You need to step in to find out the unadvertised drink specials on Mondays, but you're always sure to get $2 wells and beer. And Tuesday is movie night, with dinner and a movie starting at 8 p.m., and $2 domestic beer and well drinks.

Drink Cheap — The Annex is justly proud of its "kick ass" daily drink prices. Get $1.75 well drinks Tuesdays, Thurdays and Fridays, and on Saturdays, longnecks and wells are $1 from 2-9 p.m., and $1.75 thereafter.

Saintly Summer Specials — The Saint's Summer specials help relieve the heat of Texas months. Wednesdays means The Saint opens its doors at 8 p.m., and for the next two hours, there's no cover and you can enjoy $2 frozen margaritas. And Fridays means no cover from 9 p.m.-11 p.m.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The weeks starts off at a nice, steady pace and really shifts into a high gear on Monday. That Full Moon in your opposition sign of Scorpio on Wednesday should heighten an already powerful urge to find a mate. Stick close to home on Sunday night. Double-check all financial facts and figures.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) That vibrant and dazzling personality of yours will get a real workout this coming week. It seems as if you've been invited to every major social event in the county. By necessity, a few will need to be declined. Listen to what your significant other has to say before jumping to conclusions.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) Resist the urge to be in several places at once. Spreading yourself too thin dilutes much of that hard work. Wait until July to refinance your dwelling. A small financial upturn is close at hand — just don't spend it all on luxury items. Make sure your car is checked out from A to Z before taking that long drive.

Leo (July 23-August 22) You're known for not taking half measures or holding back, but adding a dash of subtlety to the career mix would work wonders. Don't force-feed potential clients — they don't care much for the hard sell. Vibrations on the home front look much smoother now that you're both working.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) Between work issues, family stresses and that temporary cash crunch, you're close to climbing the walls. Take a few deep breaths and chill out — everything is going to be fine. Screen all calls carefully on Sunday or your day of rest could be ruined. A potential benefactress is closer than you know.

Libra (September 23-October 22) As those storm clouds finally fade away, the skies are clear and bright. You won't be as emotional, even with that Full Moon this week. Monday's luncheon date with an old friend brings some hidden truths to light. Don't work any more hours than you are now, Libra — it would cause you to overload.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) Energies prove extremely mixed as this week starts out. Once the weekend has passed, you'll feel like a bird that's ready to take flight. Annual Full Moon in your sign on the 15th makes you absolutely magnetic. Try to make the most of this pattern, Scorp — its vibrations only last for three days.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) Most of this week looks to be business (and very busy) as usual. Incoming cash flow should be quite solid right through late July. Plans for Summer relocation begin to take shape. A fling with that sweet air sign looks about certain, but he needs to know that you're interested. Speak up!

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) Most appointments will come off as planned in your usual neat and orderly fashion — except for Wednesday, of course. Don't try to fight those Full Moon energies, Cappy — you just can't win. It's time for a PC upgrade, or if you can swing it a brand new top-of-the-line model. Shop around.

Aquarius (January 20-February 18) Unlike Capricorn, planning things out ahead of time isn't your strongest suit. Strangely enough, flying by the seat of your pants usually works out fine, and this week is no exception. Keep that day planner with you at all times, though. Buy a new pair of wiper blades for your car — it needs them asap!

Pisces (February 19-March 19) Though your intuition is quite strong and emotions seem to be in tune, your mind appears a bit cloudy. Part of the problem is trying to juggle too many projects at once. It's just not practical, Pisces — sooner or later you'll slip up and start to make mistakes. Scale back on some business commitments.

Aries (March 20-April 19) Strong challenges tend to bring the greater (sweeter) rewards. You're not one for playing it safe, Aries, but it isn't always necessary to play the longshot, right? We suggest you go the safer route for the next two weeks. Stay off the highway between Tuesday and Wednesday nights — it'll be a madhouse.
