Quick look inside

6 QUOTABLES
It was a tough week for some high-profile TV stars, from Debra Messing's pregnancy scare to Rosie O'Donnell's multiple fiascos. But others have plenty to be grateful for. In honor of Thanksgiving, we culled Turkey Day sentiments from some of our favorite gay and gay-friendly celebs.

10 FEATURE
Ripped porn god Caesar has led an unconventional life, which he talks about openly — from his abortive career as a football star to his aspirations as a bodybuilder to his wife of eight years.

Remember me?

Eric McCormack gets ignored

Will & Grace star Eric McCormack had a humbling experience when he took a road trip last summer, because he was stunned by the people who did — and didn't — recognize him.

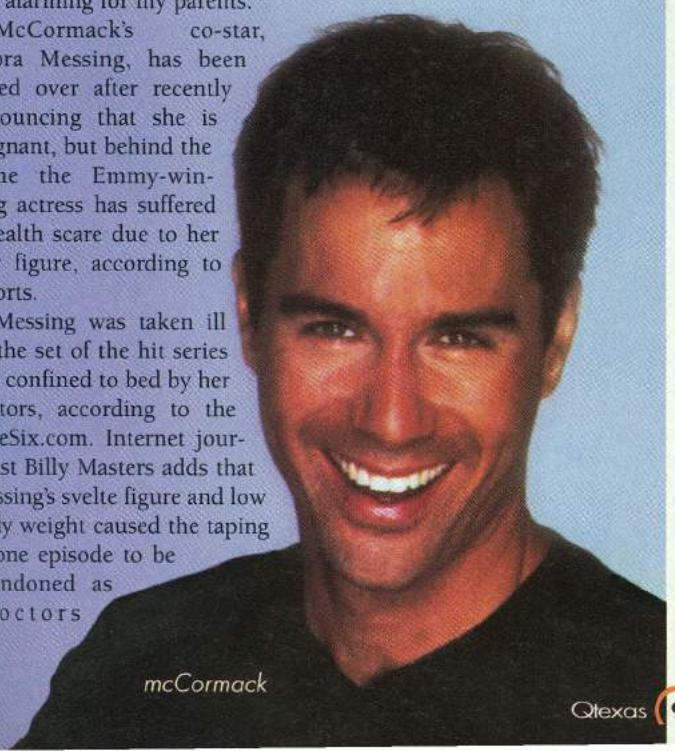

McCormack, 40, took his wife and their one-year-old son on a trip to Montana and was astounded by the way people reacted to him on his travels. "It's really fun to have the guy from the gay show pull up in a trailer park," he says. "Some people don't know, like the ones that you think would know. You see maybe a gay couple and you think, 'They don't seem to recognize me.' Meanwhile, you're on the dirt road by the strawberry stand and the 85-year-old guy says, 'Diane, look it's the homosexual from TV!' Gratifying for me, alarming for my parents."

McCormack's co-star, Debra Messing, has been cooed over after recently announcing that she is pregnant, but behind the scene the Emmy-winning actress has suffered a health scare due to her tiny figure, according to reports.

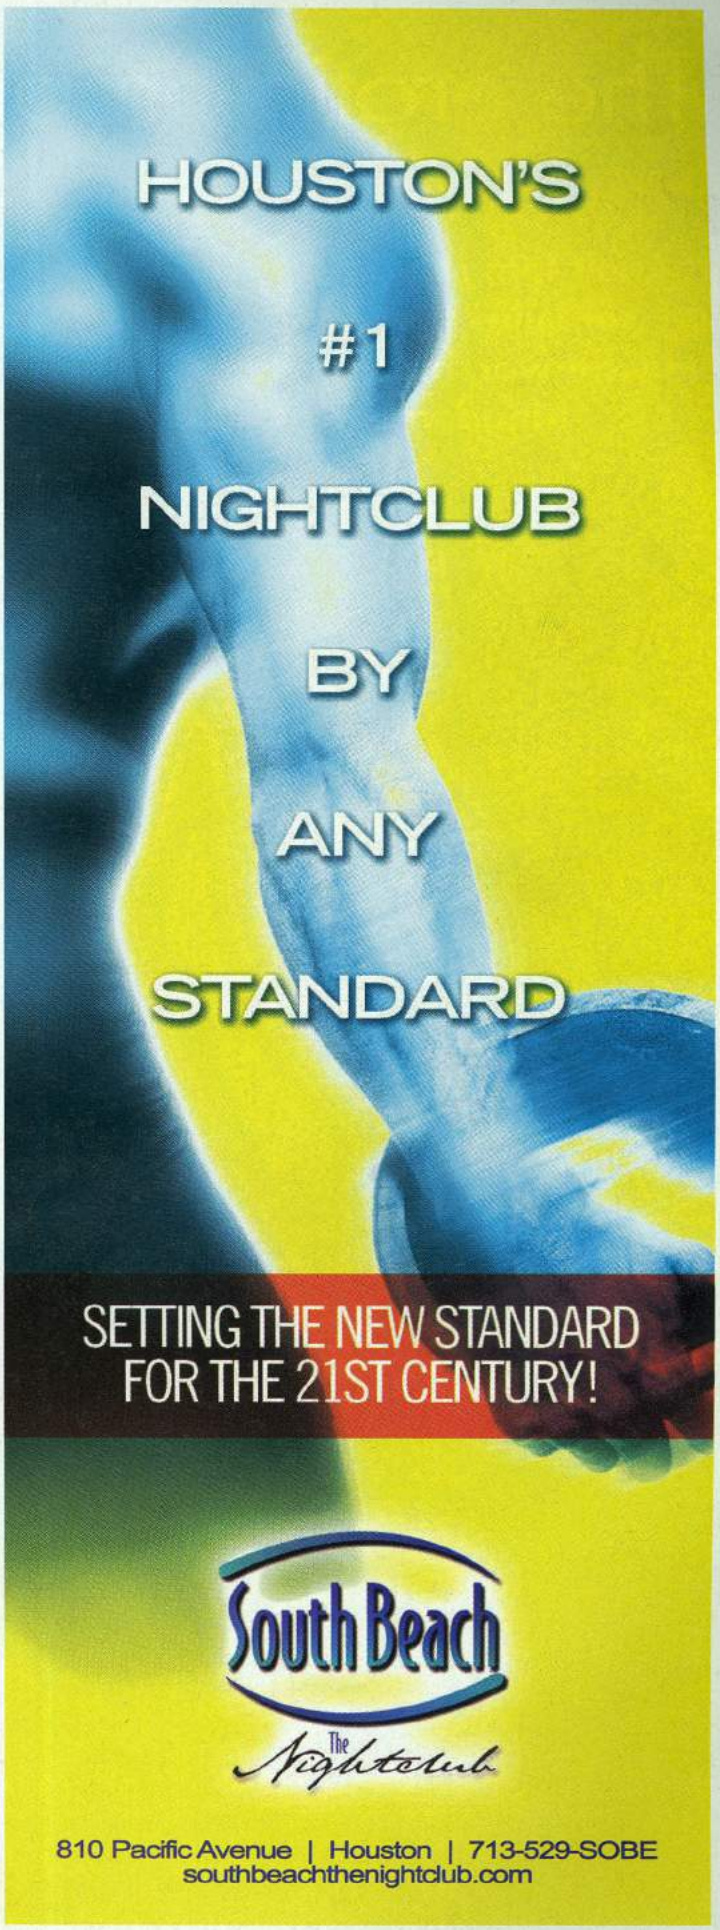

Messing was taken ill on the set of the hit series and confined to bed by her doctors, according to the PageSix.com. Internet journalist Billy Masters adds that Messing's svelte figure and low body weight caused the taping of one episode to be abandoned as "doctors restricted her to bed rest and are even initiating occasional IVs to provide nourishment to the fetus."

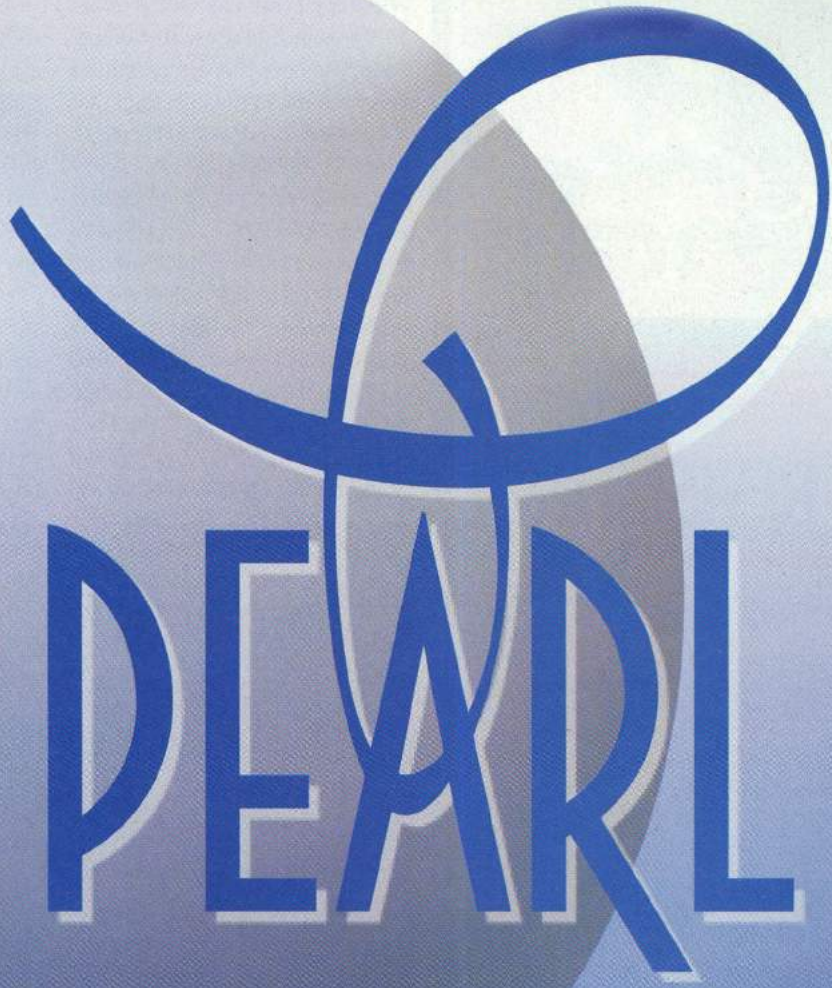

But friends of the star say she is over the worst and that medical advisors are no longer concerned for the welfare of her unborn child. A representative for the sitcom says, "She was under the weather a month ago. Everybody knew it and dealt with it. But she is fine now."

Last week was not a great one for Rosie O'Donnell. First came all the sniping news reports about her erratic behavior while running the failed magazine Rosie. Then the judge ruled against both O'Donnell and her publisher in their multimillion dollar lawsuits, leaving both humiliated and no richer. Finally, the musical about Boy George she is produced for Broadway, Taboo, has suffered mixed reviews at best (some were downright vicious) and very light ticket sales. It looks like the Queen of Nice might have to relinquish her crown.

12, I was fucking this neighborhood boy every day. When I was 13, I was having sex with women. I suppose once that sexual button is turned on, and you realize that it can feel good, it's not easy to turn off," he explains.

Caesar was prone to exhibitionism. He was the class clown, a hyperactive showoff who loved to break-dance at the local mall. In high school, he played sports year-round (football, diving and track) and always had a part-time job — anything to get away from home.

Like most Hoosier footballers, he hoped to play for Notre Dame, and he had the goods. "I didn't like to study much, but I was quick. I had a good memory, graduated with a 3.8 grade-point average and scored 1300 on my SATs," he says. But while the Fighting Irish offered him a partial scholarship, Caesar took the full ride at Western Michigan instead. In Kalamazoo, he was finally liberated from his parents.

"It would have been great if I didn't screw it all up," he says with a Midwestern farm accent. "I didn't have any guidance. College was freedom from the life I left behind, so I went crazy — hung out with the guys, drank beer and played football. I didn't really go to class, so I didn't do too good."

After barely making it through his freshman year, Caesar signed up for the v.s. Marine Corps and served four years. While stationed in Hawaii, he noticed a flyer for male dancers and started working as a Chippendale on the side.

Caesar knew he wanted to perform. After moving to Chicago, he worked for the Elite modeling agency and did some print work for Calvin Klein and Kenneth Cole. But it was stripping that gave him the biggest charge — he loved the attention, and it paid pretty well. Caesar eventually formed his own company, Sugar 'n' Spice — an all-male strip act that toured the club circuit around the U.S. In 1997, Caesar, then 30, crossed paths with the illustrious porn director Chi Chi LaRue.

After getting the Herculean newcomer in front of the camera, LaRue quickly noticed Caesar's telegenic charisma and shaped a career-defining project around this rising young talent: Caesar's Hardhat Gang Bang, a porno masterpiece that proved Caesar's insatiable appetite as a bottom. His performance has been compared to Jodie Foster's Academy Award-winning turn in The Accused — for the brutal scene where she's getting unmercifully plowed by a rowdy bunch of rapists. Gang Bang made Caesar an overnight superstar in the gay porn world.

Over the past six years, he's made 16 films. But what's most interesting about his career is that this versatile hottie has been married — to a woman! — for the past eight years. In fact, he says there are lots of married guys in the gay porn biz. But he doesn't get too wound up with labels.

"I'm just a sexual person. I can get into guys, girls, transsexuals," he explains. "When it comes to me being on the bottom, I like daddy types. But when I'm on top of things, I usually go for twinks."

His ultimate sexual fantasy? Simple: "To be on my back with a muscle chick sitting on my face, holding my legs up, while she is getting a huge cock stuffed in her and a big muscle stud, with a massive hard-on, is plowing my ass. At the end, both men unload their juice on my face."

At one point, Caesar and his wife (they have matching calligraphic tattoos on their abdomens) tried opening up their relationship with one of Caesar's boyfriends. But the three-way dynamic threw things out of balance.

About three years ago, Caesar started riding the party train into reckless oblivion. But with his wife's support, he quit some illegal habits and turned his attention to competitive bodybuilding.

At 5'10" and 245 lbs., Caesar competes under his birth name in the super heavyweight class. He trains twice a day and eats every two hours. He also runs the caesarworld.com Web site. And for fans that don't have the money to buy a membership, he regularly checks in with his yahoo.com fan group — which is free and is considered the most popular gay porn fan group on the Internet.

Caesar's plans include buying a home in La Jolla and tirelessly training to compete in the Junior National Bodybuilding and Fitness Championships in June 2004.

"I think the professional bodybuilding scene is getting more lax about allowing people from porno to participate in competitions. But it's a pretty homoerotic sport, if you think about it. You got guys up there with hardly any clothing on walking around with pumped up, beautiful bodies," he says.

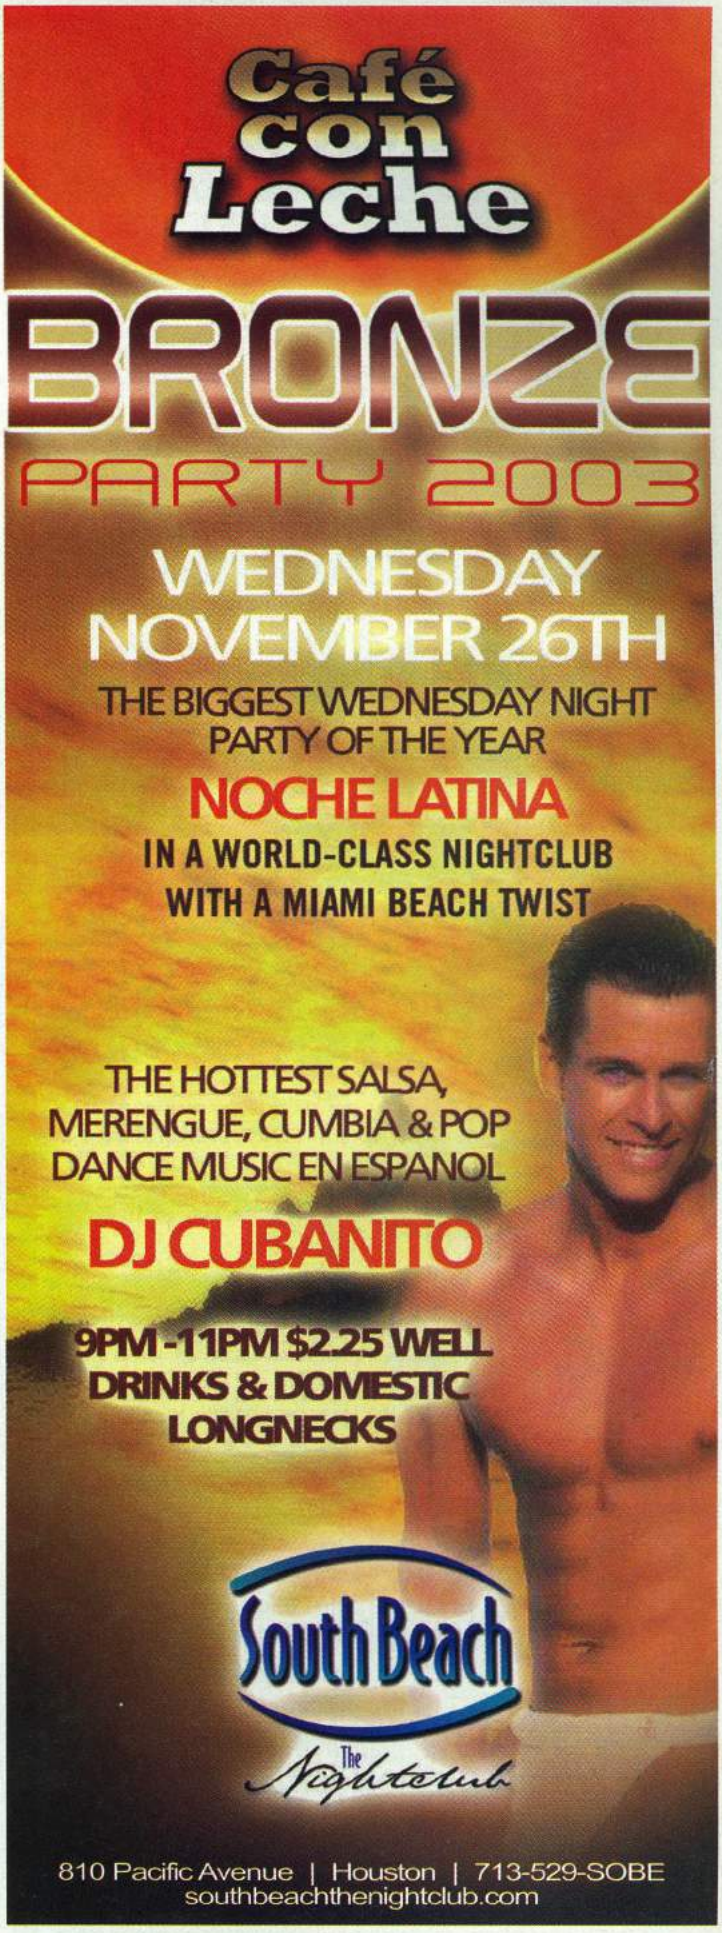

Does Caesar ever get turned on during competition?

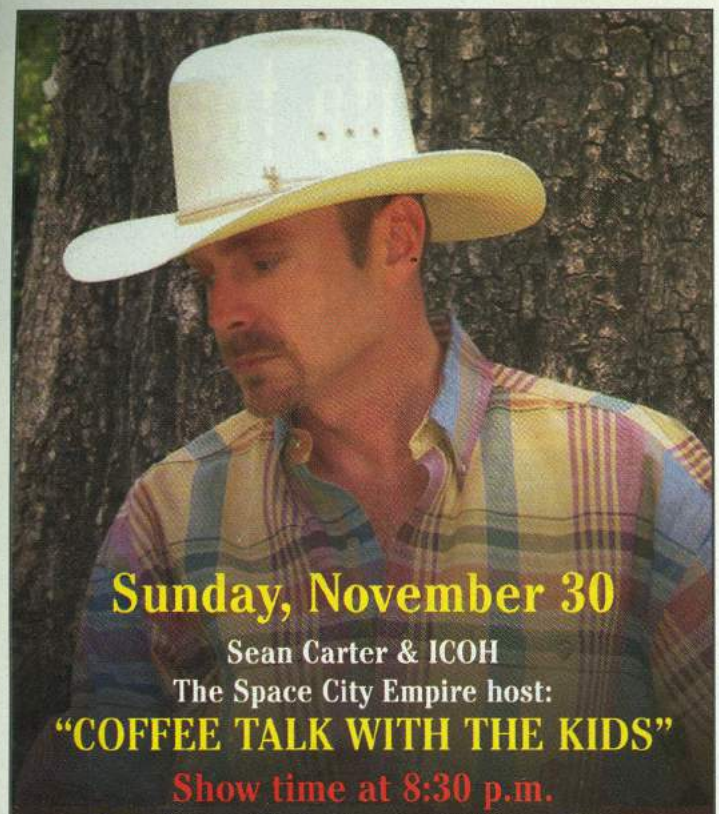

"I decline to answer that question," he laughs.

He has no immediate plans to retire from porn, but is exploring other options. He recently finished a five-week run in Denver performing in the erotic play Making Porn. He'd also like to try more legit acting gigs, but at the present time, there's no shortage of offers for XXX work.

"My past may have not been a Leave It to Beaver episode," he says "but the adult industry can be a very positive thing. You just have to keep yourself straight and avoid getting caught up in negative things."

Caesar performs at Heat, 1500 N. Main Ave. in San Antonio on November 22.

four tubes of high-strength, FDA-approved whitening gel (two tubes of 22 percent carbamide peroxide and two 17 percent solution). Second, it has everything you need to create your own dental impressions, which are turned into custom-fitted bleaching trays. They also include a set of plastic mouth guards for people who just have to start bleaching right away.

I decided to give it a try. Creating the custom impression was the first step. Basically I rolled two balls of putty together, put them in upper and lower impression trays and chomped down. Be extra careful to get the putty even and follow the instructions carefully.

After creating the impressions, you send them off to Areopagus Labs (LuxWhite's headquarters) and in 3-5 days you get your custom trays back. Mine fit like a glove. They are comfortable and non-invasive.

I was excited to get started and set aside two hours for three days in a row to test it out. Since the trays fit so well, I forgot I had them on most of the time. I did what I would normally do at home — watch TV, surf the Internet or read — although I didn't really feel comfortable initiating phone conversations.

After the first treatment, I noticed a slight difference. The kit includes a tooth shade guide (10 colors that show what shade you start out with and what shade you end up with), which put me near the top at "three." Of course, I wanted to be number one!

I saw a definite improvement after the second session, particularly on my bottom teeth, which tend to be a shade darker than the top ones. Since it is an intense bleaching gel, I had to be careful not to get it on my gums. I did have a little bit of sensitivity after the two treatments, but nothing too uncomfortable. The kit includes sensitivity toothpaste to help out when needed.

Roman points out that the bleaching gel only works on natural teeth, not caps, crowns, fillings and such. Tobacco, red wine, coffee and tea can stain teeth and affect their whiteness.

I'm happy to report that after day three my teeth could go molar-to-molar with Donny Osmond's. They are bright and white and I've used less than one tube. I can see that I'll reach my goal of whiteness in just a few more days.

Michael said people could repeat the treatment every three or four months to maintain their desired color (maintenance kits run $24.95). Friends have already noticed the difference and compliment my pearly whites. I just smile and say thank you.

Until next time, here's looking at you, kid.

by rev. bill w

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) Say farewell as the sun leaves your sign on Saturday. New planetary vibes dictate that it's best to tie up any loose ends before moving forward. Turkey Day could hold some rather pleasant surprises. Try to be completely honest with your sweetie — it's only fair to both of you.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) You were born to explore, Sag. The solar eclipse in your sign on Sunday triggers an adventure. For you, even too much is not enough at times — don't let this keep you from enjoying life's simple pleasures, especially on the 23rd. Do watch that sweet tooth, though.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) You'll be zigzagging all over the place before leaving the house on Tuesday, but most of the week falls into place quite nicely. Energy levels soar on the 27th and so does that appetite. It's okay to break the diet for one day, Cappy, so don't feel guilty about it.

Aquarius (January 20-February 18) You always set one heck of an impressive Thanksgiving table, but let someone else do the cooking. Monday finds you making the rounds all over town. Don't refuse a friend's offer to set you up on a blind date — we sense this one working out beautifully.

Pisces (February 19-March 19) You'll encounter far more green lights this week than red ones. Your charm factor will be off the charts on Tuesday. That PC is in serious need of an upgrade. Commissions look strong right through late January. A surprise (and very sweet) gift awaits on Wednesday.

Aries (March 20-April 19) The soft sell approach works better for the next month or so. A solar shift on the 22nd brings renewal to your love life. Haven't you noticed that cute Libra checking you out? Let someone else carve the turkey this year. The one you hacked up last year looked like something out of an Alien film.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Any type of business negotiation will work out to your satisfaction, and we think it's about time your career crop started coming in. Bask in the glow of contentment and have some real fun (this is an order, not a request). Thanksgiving day brings about minor family frictions, but they'll quickly settle.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) Though you may want to spend time alone, the chances of that happening this week are slim — your dazzling presence will be too much in demand to stay holed up at home. Eat lightly early in the week so you can properly feast on Thursday. A bonus both surprises and perks you up.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) Travel plans go well, Cancer, but the days leading up to takeoff look to be frantic and totally unpredictable. You'll get to help the boss calm down on Monday. Take care of that landscaping project this weekend. That vehicle is overdue for a tune up — have it done asap!

Leo (July 23-August 22) Call a mediator to help settle serious disputes at work. Be willing to share the spotlight with others. It's perfectly all right to ask for a favor now and then Leo — lord knows you've done enough of them. Sunday looks especially fine for romance. Stay home on Wednesday night.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) Sunday's lunar eclipse could send your nerves into orbit. Keep away from people who drain you. An exercise regimen would help relieve those stress-induced headaches. Your picky and fussy side gets a workout on Thursday, but so does your grace and hospitality.

Libra (September 23-October 22) Recent life changes still have you whirling. It'll take time for you to settle in. For the most part, family members are on your side (what a nice change). Be careful in selecting a new roommate — you don't want a rerun of that last fiasco. Thanksgiving proves to be enlightening.
