Taupin to provide the soundtrack for a new TV drama. The pair will write new material for Fox TV Net channel's upcoming show Rhapsody, which is a extravagant murder mystery. Producer (and former Hardy Boy) Shaun Cassidy says, "It's a soap opera with the emphasis on the opera. At its heart, there are a lot of stories in there, and to be able to use those songs is a gift. The music will be a constant component of the show. Elton and Bernie's catalogue is one of the most well-known in popular music history."

Elton and Bernie are also going to be the subject of an upcoming movie, which they are penning together. If John gets his casting druthers, he'd like to see Justin Timberlake play him. Timberlake has some experience in the part — he posed as the bespectacled one in a music video.

"Bernie and I are planning to do a movie of my life. Justin did such a great job in the video of 'This Train Don't Stop There Anymore.' It actually was so close to me, it gave me the chills when I watched it," he oozes. "I went, 'God, he really got it down.' He's a really talented boy." Apparently, Justin agrees. A spokesman says, "He is really excited about it and will seriously consider taking the role." Elton and Bernie are looking for three actors in total to play the singer through the different stages of his life. The movie will cover Elton's drug and alcohol battles, his marriage to Renate Blauel, his relationship with partner David Furnish and his friendship with tragic royal Princess Diana.

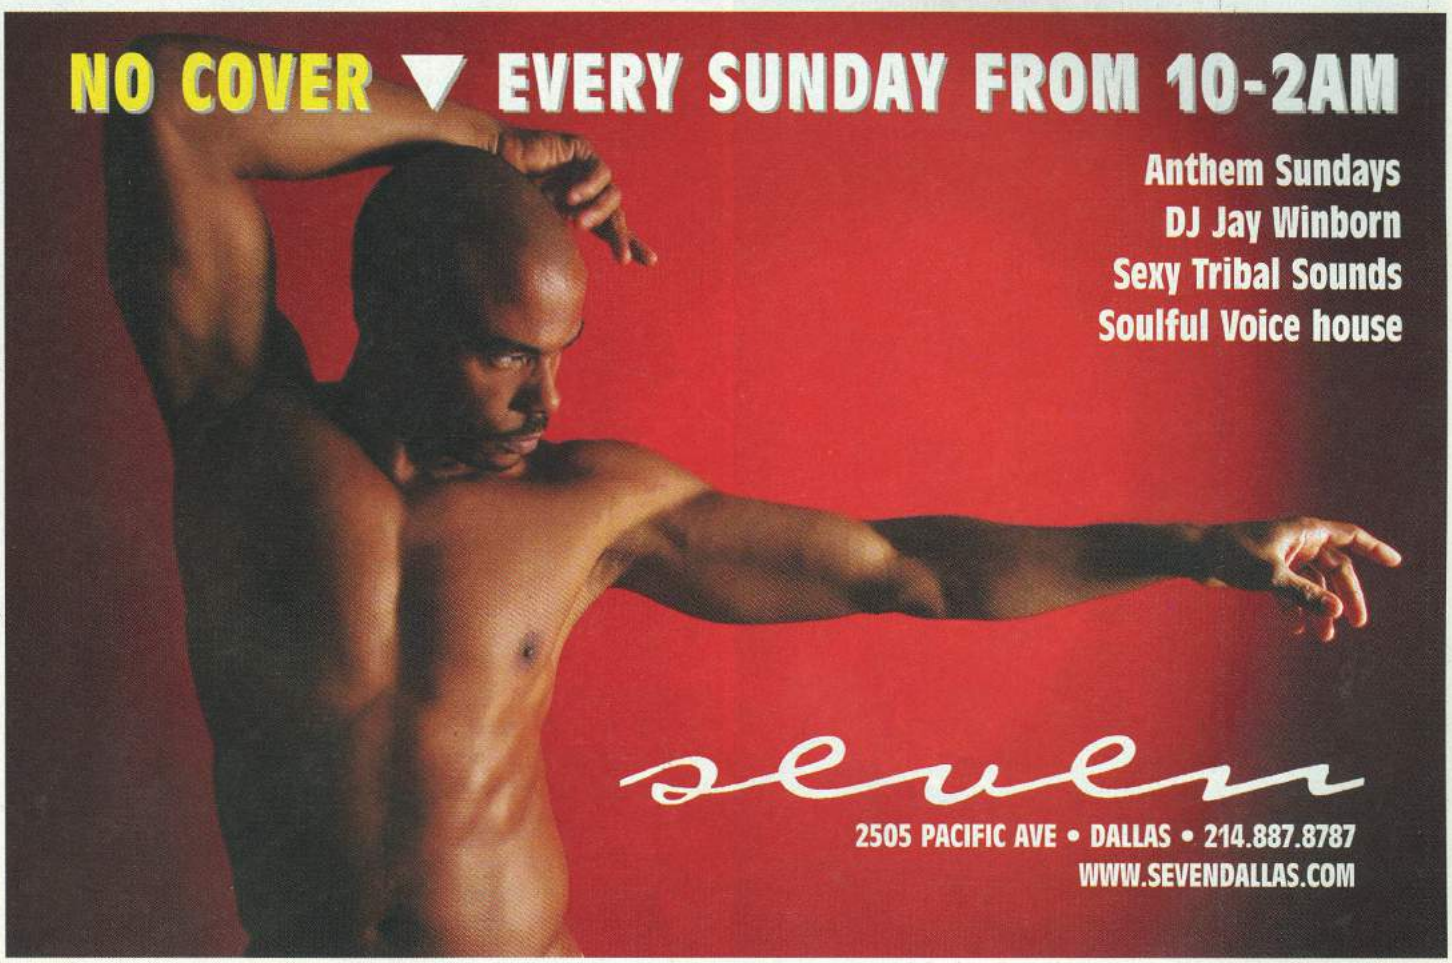

Actress Joanna Lumley has revealed a shocking possibility about her beloved Absolutely Fabulous character Patsy Stone. The man-eating, chain-smoking, champagne-quaffing character may have started life differently than we've been led to believe. "In the new episodes, we flash back into her past again, and there's more on the fact that she may have been a man with a moustache," Lumley teases.

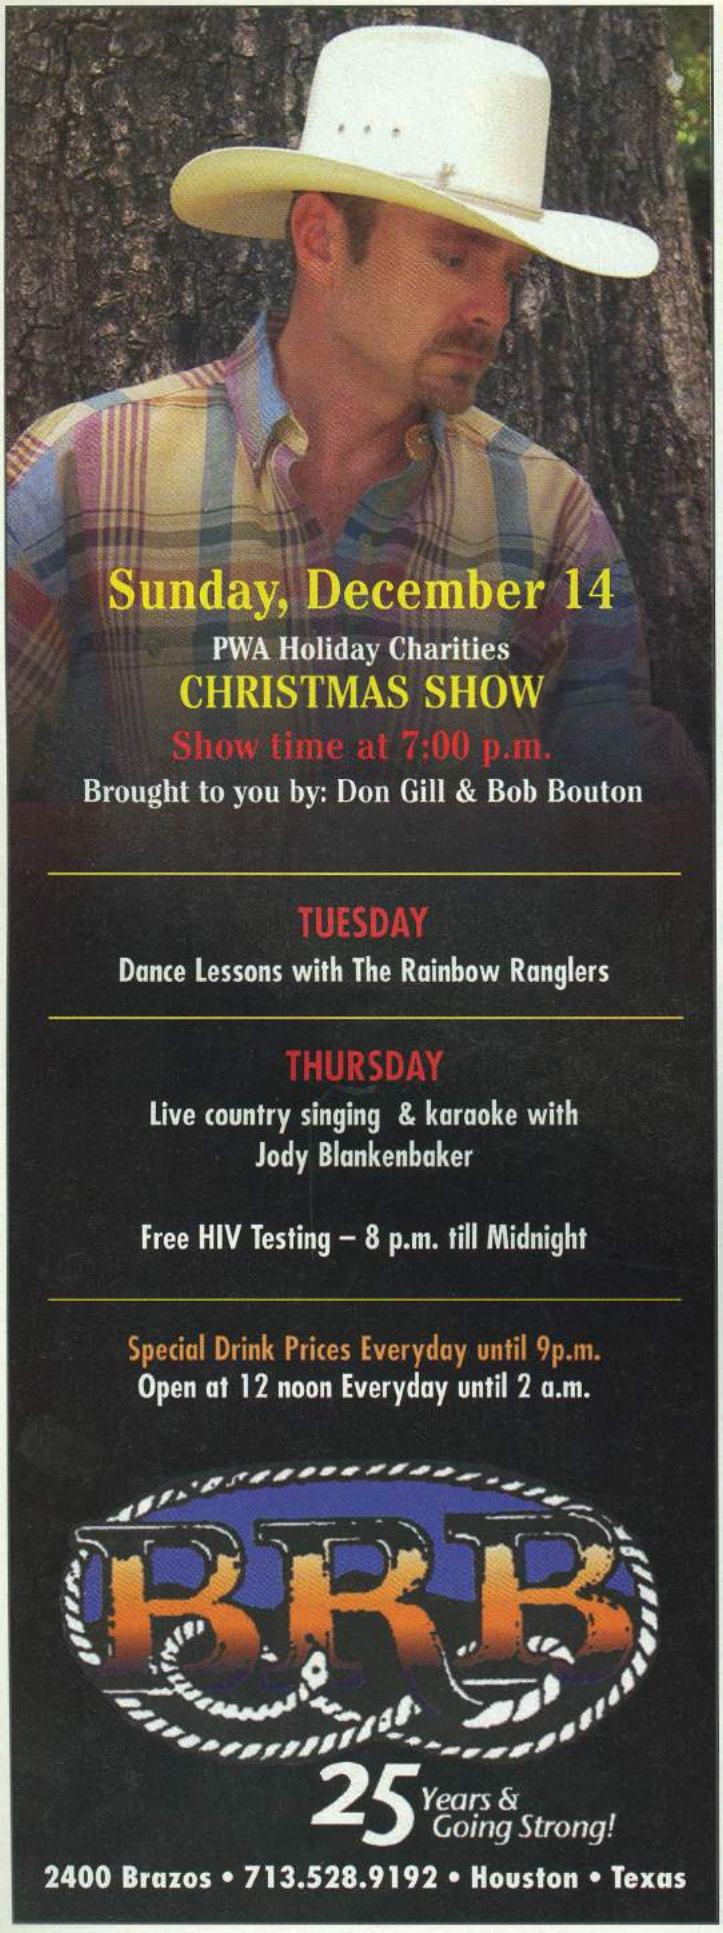

Italian '50s sex siren Gina Lollobrigida says she first realized late matinee idol Rock Hudson was gay when even her ample charms failed to keep him awake. The actress once called the most beautiful woman in the world, now 76, admits she and Rock (who hid his sexual orientation until he became ill with AIDS in the 1980s) were "in love" when they were young. But although they became intimate, she failed to keep the actor interested. "At a certain momentum he fell asleep. It happens," Lollobrigida told Larry King in a TV interview commemorating Hudson, who died in 1985.

Angels among us

Tony Kushner's gay fantasia finally reaches the screen — but was it worth the wait?

by arnold wayne jones

When Angels in America, Tony Kushner's two-play cycle — part one, Millennium Approaches, and part two, Perestroika — debuted on Broadway, it won consecutive Tony Awards and the Pulitzer Prize and was heralded as a watershed in the national debate about AIDS and gays. There was immediate talk about it being adapted to film, and while it took more than 10 years, director Mike Nichols' production, as a miniseries for HBO, mostly delivers. But even its occasional misses fail to diminish its significance or the continuing relevance of its message.

That may sound like faint praise, but it would be difficult for any film with the pedigree this one has to meet expectations. Nichols gets off to a promising start: The opening sequence is a journey through the cloudtops and over the whole expanse of the United States, starting in San Francisco and continuing east until the camera alights on a statue in New York's Central Park. The scene is dreamy — a fluid, grandiose tracking shot that takes the path an angel might fly. It sets up the fantastical tone so integral to Kushner's vision but which plays differently on the screen than on stage.

That's because Kushner's ambitiously structured story is less about plot than themes. It takes place in the mid-1980s, when

AIDS was on everyone's mind except the president's. We follow three concurrent and interrelated threads: Notorious right-wing politico Roy Cohn (Al Pacino) is rabidly homophobic in his public pronouncements but a promiscuous gay man in private; Prior Walter (Justin Kirk), a WASPy trust fund baby, contracts AIDS and is promptly abandoned by his longtime lover, Louis (Ben Shenkman); and Joe Pitt (Patrick Wilson), a Reaganaut Mormon lawyer who proudly touts morning in America even while it is lights out for many of its citizens, all the while coming to grips with being deep in the closet. Through them, plus a befuddled Angel (Emma Thompson), a nurse named Belize (Jeffrey Wright), Joe's pill-popping wife Harper (Mary-Louise Parker) and a few other people, both real and imagined, we are escorted through gay life in the waning days of the second millennium.

The teleplay hardly qualifies as an adaptation (it is a word-for-word transcription from the play), and the concept is a little pretentious, although in truth it always was. (The cast list describes the Angel as "four divine emanations: Fluor, Phosphor, Lumen and Candle" – pretty self-important stuff.) But Nichols' cast of actors mostly do phenomenal things.

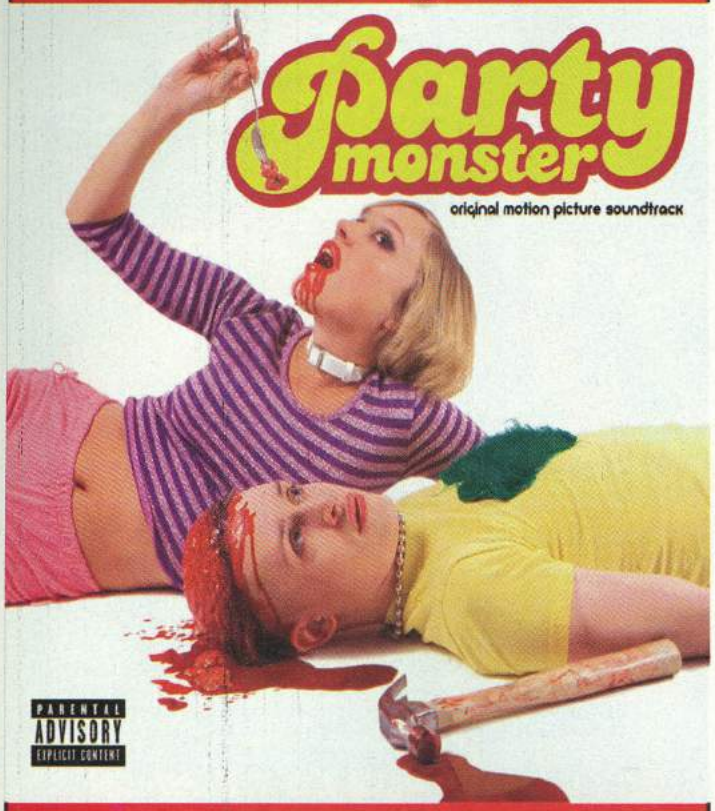

I'm one of those who believe that Meryl Streep is our greatest living actress. She assays three roles here — a kvetching old (male) rabbi, wheezing his prayers; the rigidly religious mother of Joe; and the ghost of executed spy Ethel Rosenberg, who haunts Cohn. Her screen time is limited, but serves as a showcase for her accents and famously detailed characterizations.

Pacino has aged into an abrasive actor prone to fits of yelling, which makes him ideal in this role. He captures Cohn's paradoxes vividly, like dissing La Cage aux Folles to Republican supporters while telling friends it's the best thing he's ever seen. His predatory ego-stroking of the confused, easy-to-manipulate Joe will give you chills.

Joe is predictable as a character, although that was true at the time of the original production. He's wound tighter than a cheap clock spring, and Wilson's stuffy performance fails to bring sufficient humanity to him.

While the central story is Prior's, and Kirk manages to convey both passion and sadness brilliantly, the best performance in the show comes from Wright. He's the only holdover from the original Broadway cast, but he's as fresh and riveting an actor as you'll find. His Belize drips with intelligence and compassion in every line.

Nichols lets the characters be funny when they need to be, but there are some missteps. You'll either be awed by the glorious backlit visitation by the Angel or puzzled by its hokeyness. And a dream sequence is shot like more a Calvin Klein cologne ad than a film about the plague of AIDS. And if some scenes move slowly, it is only because Nichols scrupulously adheres to every pontification Kushner writes, especially Louis' soapbox speeches about religion and politics. (Louis is a distasteful person, the least likeable of them all except for Cohn.)

Of the two parts, Millennium Approaches has the most emotional heft, Perestroika the lion's share of over-the-top theatricality (as well as the most screen time for Wright). But together they do create a complete experience, a document of the madness that was, and its, AIDS. "In the new century," opines a homeless woman near the end of part one, "I think we will all be insane." Whether that prophesy has come true is still anyone's guess.

Angels in America
Grade: B
Millennium Approaches (Part One) premieres on HBO Sunday, Dec. 7 at 7p.m. Perestroika (Part Two) premieres Sunday, Dec. 14 at 7 p.m. Both parts will be rebroadcast at various times throughout the month.

by rev. bill w

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) Your popularity soars this week, as more people get wind of your talents and sense of humor. You'll get to party hearty on the 7th and that full moon on the 8th energizes you to the max. Cash flow is stronger, but will really bloom next week. Splurge on a new pair of jeans.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) It looks like a calm week snuggled between two storms of weekend activity. You need to take the entire weekend off (no arguments!) to recharge. A significant other has good news for you on Wednesday. An all-bark-and-no-bite competitor will soon bite the dust.

Aquarius (January 20-February 18) It's important to effect a take-charge attitude this week and not let people push you around. Speak your mind clearly, but go easy on that colorful vocabulary of yours. A minor victory on Monday leads to your winning the war in mid-January. Carefully map out a battle plan.

Pisces (February 19-March 19) Mars (the planet of vitality) leaves your sign next week. For now the pace needs to be slow and steady. Progress is being made on the job more than you know. A newfound friend is truly a confidant who can be trusted. Go out for a night of dinner and dancing on Saturday.

Aries (March 20-April 19) Patience was never your strong suit, but it's vital to be as diplomatic as possible right now. The urge to run roughshod over others will be quite strong, especially on Monday. Count to 100 before presenting your viewpoint. Your digestive system needs a break from all of that fast food.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Once again you need some time to go off and do some exploring, and there's no better time than this weekend. Progress of a parental figure puts your mind at ease. Tuesday looks best for advertising and networking your talents, but avoid bragging or showing off on the 11th — it could backfire.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) A full moon in your sign on the 8th lights up your romantic life brightly. But beware — you may not be able to choose the ideal love interest. Don't let all the attention and flattery go to your head. Sunday brunch brings about a lovely surprise. Tuesday is chaotic but rewarding.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) Avoiding the limelight is comforting, but it diminishes results/success. Get out there and knock on doors, Cancer. It's time to be bold, brave and even brazen (ask a Leo for pointers). Your objectives are clearer now, and all that's needed is to follow-through. Avoid highway driving on Monday.

Leo (July 23-August 22) It's strange that Cancer has to be like you and you need to be subtle and low key. That won't be easy while dealing with a full moon, but you've got tons of self-control. Increase those workouts to relieve stress. Try to squeeze in a massage Saturday before heading to that awesome concert.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) Don't feel so conflicted because career obligations are hampering your love match. Work burdens won't last much longer. Your attention to detail and honesty wins brownie points from the boss. The only free time you'll have is Sunday, so make the most (or least) of it.

Libra (September 23-October 22) Monday's full moon will have a wonderful effect on your career and health in general. A job opportunity comes knocking loudly. We suggest that you take it. Don't allow a parent to browbeat you. What you need now more than ever is high self-esteem and a positive outlook.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) A fund-raising event goes amazingly well, and you'll reap the lion's share of credit. Finalize holiday flight plans by the 10th. Your sweetie has been distant due to lack of attention, so you need to work on fixing that asap! Business connections provide the means to scale new financial heights.
