THE BIZARRE SEXED-UP KISS-

She hated men, he hated women. So the teen-age lesbian and the prancing nance decided to put their crossed wires together in the queerest mating this side of Sodom and Gomorrah. Soon she had to become a prostitute to help pay for their purple passions. It was the most perverted partnership and the end result was sheer, unadulterated murder!

BY STEWART CLEAVES

TEXAS PRISON OFFICIALS are still wondering if lesbians and male homosexuals fry in the electric chair the same way as, sexually normal murderers.

The officials would have had the answers after they led convicted killers Carolyn Ann Lima, a 20-year-old lesbian and Leslie Ashley, 24, her male homosexual paramour, into the execution chamber at the State Prison.

But last-minute stays of execution saved the lives of the bizarre couple at least for the time being.

While it's highly doubtful if the average person has ever wondered how homosexuals act when strapped in the electric chair, most people have probably speculated about what might happen if a confirmed lesbian and an overt male homosexual fell in love.

By their own admissions—which were substantiated by a vast quantity of independent evidence—both Carolyn Lima and Leslie Ashley formed homosexual behavior patterns early in life. She, a hardened lesbian, and he, a prancing swish, did meet—and they did fall in love.

The result was a sordid, abysmally depraved drama which was finally climaxed by a particularly ghastly murder committed during the course of a degenerate orgy.

But perhaps it is best to start at the beginning—with the background history of each member of the weirdly-matched killer-couple.

Let's take Leslie Ashley first—a man who had never really been a man, an individual whose sexual patterns had been aberrant since his childhood days.

"Leslie has always been emotionally mixed up," his mother says. "I've always known this, since he was a child. He's sick, very sick. What else can you expect me to say about a man who has always wanted to be a girl?"

A Houston resident, Leslie Ashley had always been a source of considerable concern to his mother. Recognizing his sexual problems, she had to obtain treatment for her son. But, she didn't have the kind of money needed to hire the high-powered psychiatrists who might have helped. Besides, there is considerable doubt whether Leslie would have cooperated. He seemed entirely content to be a homosexual. He really "always wanted to be a girl."

Under these circumstances, it should hardly seem surprising that he decided to make his living as a female impersonator, working in the sort of squalid, shadowland nightclubs and cabarets where such impersonations are considered "entertainment."

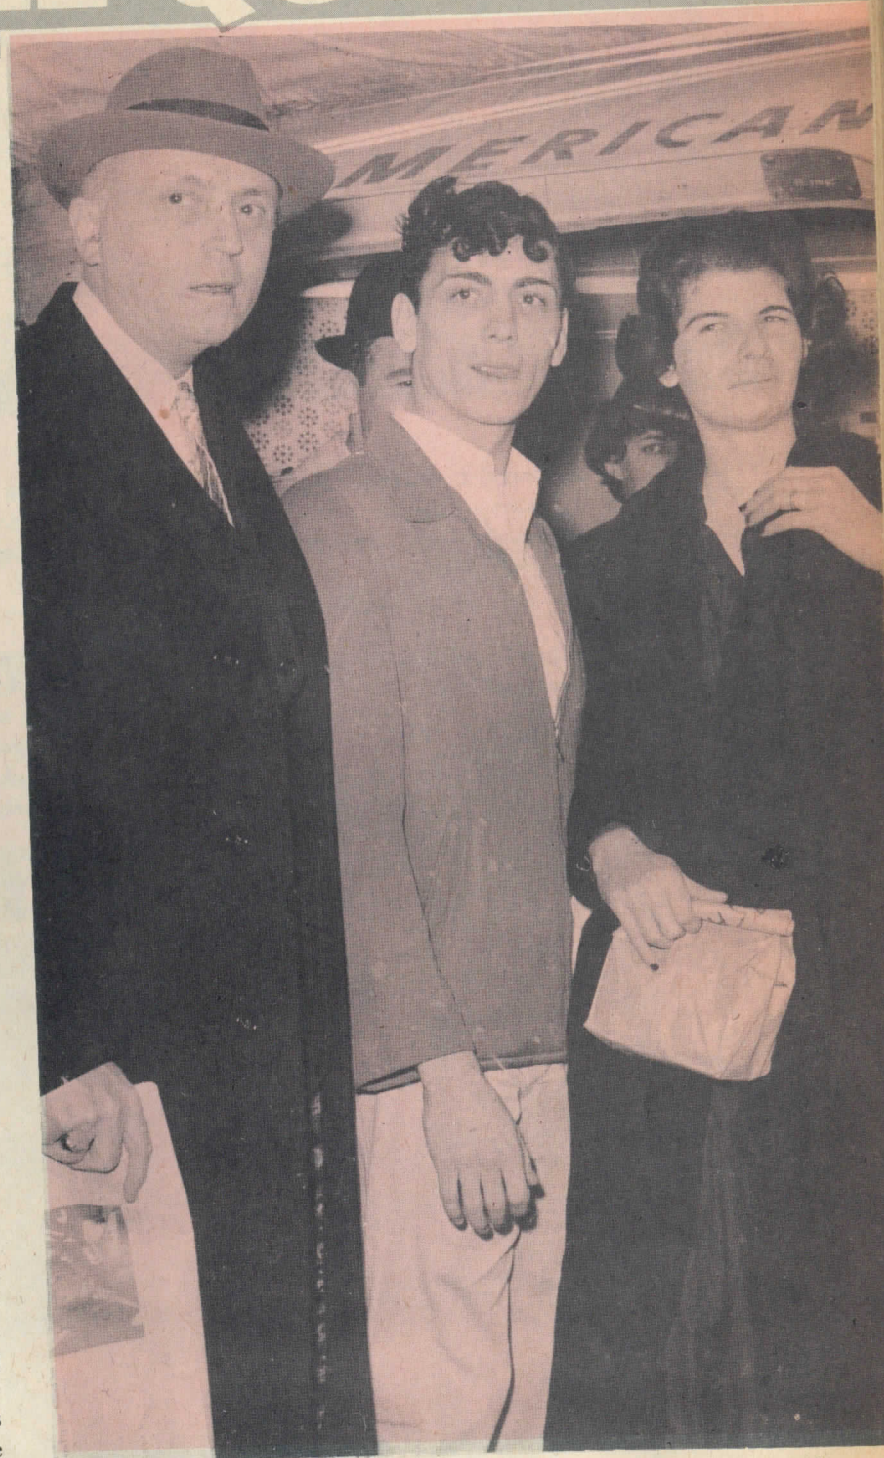

Leslie was not only a homosexual, he was a transvestite—an all-around sexual deviate who loved to masquerade as a girl, to wear cosmetics, a wig, women's underclothes, long nylon stockings and dresses.

"I adore the feel of women's clothes against my skin," he frequently lisped to his friends and acquaintances, "I just adore it!"

And, as photographs taken of him in female guise and garb attest, he "made" an attractive woman—looking for all the world like a girl with almond-shaped eyes and finely-molded eyebrows.

Unfortunately—not only for Leslie, but for Carolyn Lima and for the man who would be killed by them—Leslie Ashley was not a very talented entertainer. No matter how much he looked like a girl, he just didn't seem to have enough singing, dancing or joke-telling talent to obtain more than sporadic nightclub bookings. He was frequently without work for long periods.

During such times, Leslie lived on his unemployment compensation, what money he could pick up from older homosexuals who were willing to pay for their kicks, and the odd dollars he picked up from a few odd jobs he held at one time or another.

In 1961, when arrested for brutal murder, Leslie Ashley and Carolyn Ann were found in New York. U.S. Marshall took them back to Tex.

Leslie and Carolyn stole the car of the man they murdered and took off on a wild dash that ended in Manhattan, where F.B.I. caught up with them.

Nonetheless, he continued to frequent the "queer" bars which abound in Houston. Like so many other homosexuals, he felt a compulsive—an obsessive—need to be with his own "kind," to have the companionship of others who lived in the murky half-world people by swishes and lesbians.

It was in one of these bars that he met Carolyn Ann Lima during the summer of 1960.

LOVELY LEZ

Carolyn was only 17 and an exceptionally pretty, full-bosomed girl, a brunette who bore more than a faint resemblance to Soraya, the onetime Queen of Iran. But Carolyn had sexual problems, too—serious ones.

When only 12, the girl had gone on a swimming party with a group of other youngsters. The kids went out into the country outside Houston, to a lake. During one point in the otherwise innocent outing, she found herself alone with an 18-year-old youth.

"Come here," he said, slipping his arm around the girl's waist.

She tried to pull away—but the youth grabbed her. He put his hand over her mouth to prevent her from screaming. With his other hand, he tore off her bathing suit, then raped her.

The experience was terrifying and and extremely painful. Carolyn was too frightened and ashamed to tell anyone about it. The experience left a deep scar on her subconscious mind. She rapidly developed a hatred for men—for all men. Then, she was seduced by a somewhat older girl, a lesbian.

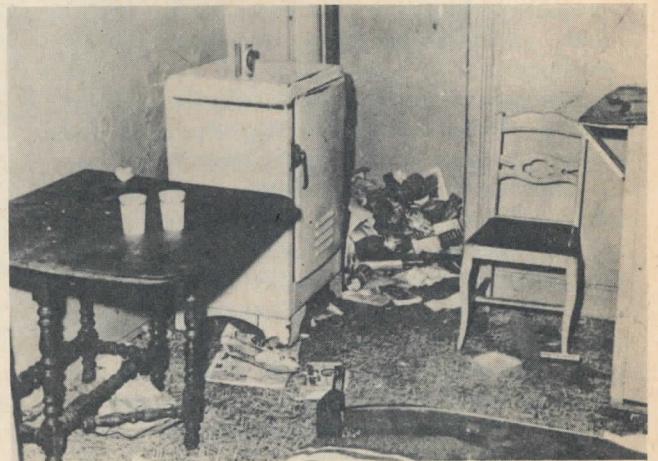

The girl's love-making was gentle, tender, considerate—everything that the brutal rape had not been. With that, the pattern was established. Her hatred of men intensified. The thought of having sexual intercourse with a man was loathsome and revolting to her.

Long before she reached her 17th birthday, Carolyn Ann Lima was a confirmed lesbian. When she left her home to go out for an evening, she told her mother she was going to the movies or to visit a girl friend—but instead, she went to the clubs and bars where Houston's homosexuals of both sexes congregated.

Her meeting with Leslie Ashley was one of those casual, everyday things that happen all the time in such establishments. The tall, slender man sat down at a table occupied by a group of lesbians, many of whom had seen his female impersonation act. (Continued on page 55)

Leslie thought he made a better woman than most women do. He's dressed in gal's garb to prove point.

This is the room Leslie Ashley & Carolyn Ann shared in wedded bliss of a most weird sort—until prostitution led to murder.

ple to share new adventures. Have modern, varied interests. If interested in having good time, send detailed letter and photos. NO PRUDES, please!"

Talk about laying it right on the line, well there it is. Here's another one:

"White couple, 34-40. Enjoy photography. Wish to meet other couples. We are VERSATILE, UNINHIBITED and looking for friendship with couples. No PRUDES. PHOTO a must."

Obviously, seeing is believing, like this ad from a California pair all set for a stroll through their own sick, and special garden of pleasure:

"Young couple, 24-28, would like to meet other modern couples, no prudes, interested in nudism, and fun. Photo a must."

There's no doubt that a widespread crackdown on this post office sex roulette is imminent. And none too soon, either. For these eager-beaver wife-swappers have gone completely overboard and authorities just won't put up with any any more. They're taking action!!!

THOSE SEXED-UP KISS-AND-KILL QUEERS

Lesbians and male homosexuals usually get along well together. Both types of deviates are outside the pale—and this is enough to create a common ground of understanding. Then, of course, neither type need be jealous of the other.

The meeting between Carolyn Ann Lima and Leslie Ashley different, somehow. A sudden rapport sprang up between them almost from the very beginning.

To his astonishment, Leslie Ashley realized that the pretty girl attracted him, appealed to him. Carolyn, on the other hand, felt a warm glow of response to the gentle, feminine manner of the handsome young man.

Acquaintance grew swiftly into friendship—and after only a few days, friendship burgeoned into a form of sexual desire utterly foreign to them both. Unable to understand why or how, Leslie Ashley found himself actually wanting Carolyn—one of the very few times, if not the only time, in his life that he had ever felt that way.

Carolyn Lima was no less astounded to discover herself moved by the same sort of desires—heterosexual desires. She thought she'd never want to have another man touch her, much less make love to her, but now . . .

They decided to try living together. Carolyn promptly quit high school and enrolled in a beauty college. She informed her mother, Mrs. Mae Lima, that she was leaving home to "marry" Leslie Ashley. For some reason, never fully explained, Mrs. Lima accepted her daughter's explanation without question and raised no objections.

Leslie told his mother, Mrs. J. H. Ayres a similar story. Mrs. Ayres, doubtless overjoyed to see signs that her son was beginning to develop heterosexual patterns, rented an apartment for him and Carolyn in a rather shabby section of Houston. Leslie and Carolyn moved in—without benefit of marriage license.

It was a small, two-room apartment. The couple had been in it for only a few days when Ashley's homosexual tendencies manifested themselves strongly. He announced that he "had to have a man." He went out—and returned soon afterwards with a "boy-friend" he had picked up in some "queer bar."

The dismal episode was often repeated. Leslie's homosexual yearnings had not been eliminated by the "success" of his sexual activity with Carolyn. He continued to experience homosexual urges—and he continued to bring men home, spending the night with them in the bedroom while Carolyn slept on the couch.

Before long, the couple began to have serious financial problems. Leslie wasn't working. Nightclub bookings—always few and far between—were now nonexistent. As for Carolyn, she was going to beauty-school and not earning any money.

Ashley suggested that the girl earn some money by prostituting herself. At first, Carolyn refused. Ashley pleaded, raged, wept, threatened to walk out, to throw Carolyn into the street, to commit suicide. He used every cynical appeal in his hysterical, homosexual's bag of emotional tricks on the 17-year-old girl.

No one knows what went through Carolyn Ann Lima's mind while she was forced to undergo this barrage of pleas and threats. But, at last, the girl allowed herself to be persuaded. She let Ashley talk her into becoming a prostitute.
