The Lavender Baedeker

In 1833, Karl Baedeker, a German publisher, issued his first Guidebook to Europe. This book became known as one of the most famous of all Tourist Guides. "The Baedeker" was a household word in Europe. Prior to this all information regarding places to stay and to eat were rumors and misinformation. It would be easy to publish a Guidebook to the most famous places in this country. These are now common knowledge, and are contained in thousands of tourists guides.

But we have set out to compile a list of little known places whose reputation has previously been passed by word of mouth. Some of these places are not exactly the type of place that you would take your maiden Aunt. Also, to the contrary, some of them are models of decorum. We have made no attempt to evaluate them. They have been recommended to us by our many, many friends.

In fact, this Guide to the Most Interesting Places in the United States is the result of thousands of letters asking the Question: "What are the most interesting places in the United States?". Undoubtedly we have missed a great number of lesser known places.

In many instances you will find that the name of an establishment is not followed by an address. There may be one of two reasons for this; either our informant 'knew how to get there but did not know the address', or, in some few instances the owners were reluctant to have their places known to more people.

The rapidly changing scene will have made this Guide less than completely accurate, even before it is printed. Any Travel Guide is subject to this failing. However, we have already started on the preparation of the Supplement to this Guide. It will be released on the 1st of May 1964. If any of our subscribers detect any inaccuracy in this Volume, or if any new, interesting places open across the country, they should be reported to us. The Supplement to this Volume will be priced at only 50¢ and will contain only deletions or additions to this Volume. In order that you can be sure to be notified when the Supplement is ready for distribution you should send your name and address to the Publisher.

We hope that you will find your LAVENDER BAEDEKER enjoyable reading and travelling.
