PRIME CUTS FROM AUSTIN

The Club Austin, Austin Country, and the New Apartment will sponsor the 1st Mr. Gay Metro Austin Contest, Wednesday, April 27 at 10pm at the Austin Country. Applications are available wherever you see a Mr. Gay Metro Austin poster. Contestants will be judged on sportswear, casual wear, swimwear, response to questions, and personal interviews. The winner will represent Austin in the Mr. Gay Texas Pageant later in the summer.

"STEMS AND SEEDS" AUDITIONS

Producer Phil Osterman has selected Houston as the point of origin for his new contemporary revue show Stems and Seeds. As a multi-media extravaganza, Stems and Seeds will center around a cast of 16 performers of varied ages, drawn from Houston and New York talent. Written by Houstonians Carl Cochran and David Christian, the show is planned as a "theatrical event for those of high consciousness."

Auditions for Houston talent will be held on Sunday, April 24, at Liberty Hall, 1610 Chenevert. Singers will audition from 4–6pm; dancers from 7–8pm. Singers should be prepared to perform two selections, one ballad and one song of a rock nature. A pianist will be provided.

The show is currently slated for a 4-week Houston run, followed by a brief West Coast tour, and then to its Broadway opening in late September. Stems and Seeds will be Osterman's first Houston-based production since departing Houston to undertake his now-famous hit Let My People Come.

April 23—29, 1977

FOR ALL SIGNS: Although we speak of the planets' influences in a mysterious far off way, most of them can be seen with the naked eye. In the evening spring sky, Mercury can be seen just after sunset near the horizon. That larger star is Jupiter and its many moons in Gemini. Fading from a spectacular showing all winter in the evening sky is Venus, which will soon become a morning star along with Mars visible just before dawn. Saturn's rings make a super telescope sight as it lumbers along in the constellation Leo.

TAURUS (April 21—May 20): Last Tuesday, Mercury turned retrograde in the sign of the bull. On the same day, the Sun entered your sign for a month stay. Mercury will cause communication delays but the Sun back in your sign will give you more stubborn vitality.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 21): The Moon left your sign Saturday at 9:25am. Hopefully any new plans were laid before its exit from your sign. If not, wait til midweek as Mars turns to forward motion Wednesday, April 27.

CANCER (June 22 — July 23): From Saturday at 9:25am til Monday, April 25 at 8:40pm, the Moon will spend 2½ days in your sign, making it a "hot" weekend for Moon children.

LEO (July 24 — August 23): Your ruler, the Sun, entered Taurus on Tuesday, April 19 at 11pm, causing you to be more determined and stubborn for the next 30 days. Leo the lion will now roar.

VIRGO (August 24—September 23): Your ruling planet Mercury turned retrograde on April 19 at 8:25am. The backward motion will delay all your communications. No planets are in Virgo this week.

LIBRA (September 24-October 23): Your ruling planet Venus, which has been going backward for about a month, makes a u-turn in the sky, Wednesday, April 27, putting your love life once again in forward motion. Venus makes a good trine to fire-sign affairs.

SCORPIO (October 24-November 22): Uranus remains the only planet in your sign, lazily paddling along (10 degrees) one third of the way into Scorpio. This planet, which brings out the unusual quickly, is your main roadblock this

SAGITTARIUS(November 23-December 22): With Venus turning direct, April 27, in Aires and making a nice trine to your sign, archers feel an upsurge in admirers and love affairs.

CAPRICORN(December 23-January 19): Your ruling planet Saturn took a turn for the better, April 10, when it once again began forward motion. Your life should continue to smooth out as the days roll into May.

AQUARIUS(January 20-February 19): Your ruling planet Uranus remains at 10 degrees in sexy Scorpio putting the accent on sensual matters and an attraction to water signs like Scorpio, Cancer, and Pisces.

PISCES (February 20 — March 20): Your ruling planet Neptune is still plodding along in firey Sagittarius, giving added fire to your personality and an attraction to the 3 fire signs: Aires, Leo, and Sagittarius.

AIRES (March 21 — April 20): Wow! Mars, which rules your sign and your sex drive, enters your sign of the ram, April 27 at 9:45am, plus Venus turns direct in Aires the same day. There should be no reason whatsoever for you to be without love.

Life With Vera

by John Gardner

Phoebe burst through Vera's front door. Excitedly. 240 pounds of quivering joy and anticipation.

"Vera! Vera! Come downstairs, quick!" Phoebe screamed. "I got a date. I want you to meet him."

"Be right there," Vera replied, shouting from the upstairs bedroom.

Phoebe raced from the living room and out to the front porch. Then, within seconds, emerged again into the living room, proudly pushing the wheelchair containing Chief Stone Face, a semi-breathing object which bore the appearance of a withered pea pod amid molting feathers.

"You'll like Vera's place, Stoney," Phoebe explained. "See. There's this wall. And this wall. And this wall. And this wall. And we're right back where we started from. Wasn't that fun?"

The 97-year-old Early American groaned from dizziness.

"Vera! Hurry up!" Phoebe yelled.

"Coming, coming," Vera reassured, descending the staircase. "I had to put my sewing machine back in the— What the hell is that!"

"Vera, I'd like you to meet Chief Stone Face. I went to the Shrine Circus and on the way out..."

"Is he in pain?" Vera asked, noting the Chief's rather age-puckered facial distortions.

"No," Phoebe answered. "He's just a bit tuckered out from the trip over here. The tow rope kept breaking."

"How do you do, Chief?" Vera uttered perfunctorily. And upon getting no response, asked, "Phoebe, can he hear what I'm saying?"

"Not completely. He's..."

"Good!" Vera bellowed. "He's OLD, Phoebe. He's TOO OLD!"

"Vera!" Phoebe pleaded. "Stop picking on him. I don't know why you always pick on my dates."

"How can you say that? You know I'm your faithful servant and loyal best friend. But, look at him! Last week it was the gypsy fortune teller. The week before that, the two Greek sailors. And what about those Siamese twins from Portugal?"

"Well! And you're the one who told me I should stick to American boys. And who could be more American than the Chief? He's been here for almost a hundred years."

"That's 3,650 risings of the moon," Vera calculated. "That's TOO many, Phoebe!"

"He's got his good points. He's a doctor," Phoebe elaborated.

"A doctor?" Vera asked.

"For his tribe. And they say he's a very good one. See, what he does, he places the patient on a couch, and then he puts his medical instruments beside the bed, all laid out in a neat little row, and then he picks up the tom-tom and crossbones and..."

"PHOEBE!" Vera wailed. "Listen to me. You are not, under any circumstances, repeat not, in any way, shape, or form, going to begin a relationship with this....this....THIS WHEELED EAGLE!"

Suddenly, the Chief exploded into ritual spasms and began beating on the arms of his wheelchair, performing loud tribal chants.

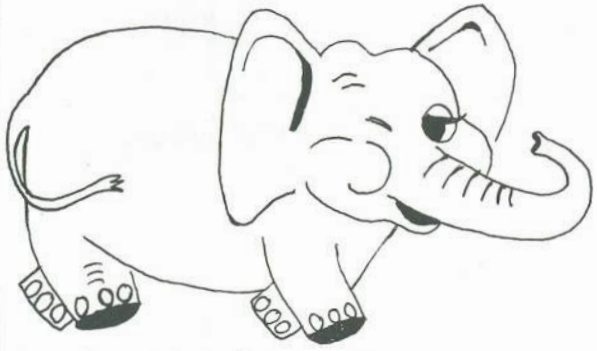

"Ahhhhhhh!" Vera screamed, terrified. "I take it back! I take it back! Back! Back!"

"Now, now," Phoebe consoled, quieting the Chief down. "Calm down Stoney, honey. It's okay. Calm down. That's right. Everything's fine. I'm here."

"Quick! Fane me, fan me," Vera swooned, attempting to regain composure. "Wheeeew. Does he do that often?"

"Now and then," Phoebe explained. "Sometimes he gets a little moody."

"Moody! You call that moody? Girl, I was watching my life pass before my eyes. And I got all the way up to high school graduation. I need a drink."

"Every so often he's able to pick up on a word or two. You can be talking right along and he won't hear anything. But suddenly. He'll hear one of your words. And it gets him just real excited."

"I'll staple my lips," Vera promised. "Are there any certain words that are his Greatest Hits?"

That time I think it was...ah... E-A-G-L-E," Phoebe spelled.

"E-A-G-L-E?" Vera asked.

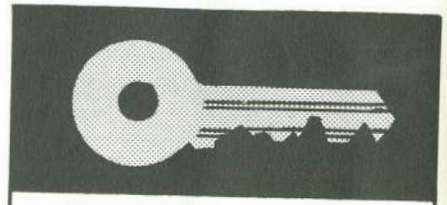

"I think that's how you spell it?" Phoebe questioned.

"Yes, dear," Vera reassured."That's how you spell it. But why? Why... that word?"

"It reminds him of his homeland. He gets excited when he hears things that remind him of his homeland."

"Well, for Christ's sake," Vera warned, "don't bring him to my annual Annie Get Your Gun party!"

"Don't make fun," Phoebe chided. "He's had a hard life. His own family sold him to the circus last year. For a buffalo and 20 free tickets."

Vera

"Sounds like a fair price to me," Vera observed.

"They put him in a booth," Phoebe continued, "and charged 50c for people to see him. Chief Stone Face—The Man on the Nickel! Poor man. My poor baby. He's lonely. He cries out for companionship. I'm all he's got. In the whole world. I'm the chosen one. Fate. In the void of cruel civilization, he sought me. Me. Me, alone. He reached out. Reached out. And looped his cane through my belt buckle. And off he went."

"I think I'll have another drink," Vera sighed.

"I'm disappointed," Phoebe said. "I thought if anyone would understand, you would."

"Pardon?"

"My needs. Look at me. Old Ton-A-Fun. I'm not like you or Burt or Zachary. I don't have much going for me. I've surrendered, Vera. I can't win the race. I can't. I've never been in the winner's circle. I've never gotten a prize. And I've never been one. But I still...every now and then... I still...I need for some living thing to notice that on the face of the planet, I'm still here."
